THE BELLEFONTE REPUBLICAN

ESTABLISHED IN 1869. "Let us see to it, that a Government of the People, for the People, and by the People, shall not Perish from the Earth."—A. LINCOLN. TERMS: $2.00 PER ANNUM.

VOL. VII. BELLEFONTE, PENN'A., WEDNESDAY MORNING, AUGUST 18, 1875. NO. 32

BELLEFONTE REPUBLICAN

BY EDWARD T. TUTEN.

Terms, $2.00 per annum in Advance

REPUBLICAN STATE NOMINATIONS.

FOR GOVERNOR,

JOHN F. HARTRANFT.

FOR STATE TREASURER,

HENRY RAWLE.

POLITICAL NOTES.

—The Commissioner of Internal Revenue believes that, with good management, there will be no further need of increased taxation by the next Congress.

—In Republican Vermont the State debt has been reduced to $167,500, which is not yet due, while the cash in the Treasury amounts to nearly that sum, and the sinking fund to $167,932 more.

—The present political canvass in Maine ought to be called the "Open Letter Campaign." Nearly every point at issue between the two parties has been covered by means of "open letters."

—The heaviest Democratic majorities at the late election in Kentucky were cast in those districts where the school house is almost an unknown institution. This illustrates the operation of cause and effect.

—The North Carolina Constitutional Convention is still claimed by both parties. It looks mightily as though the Democrats were striving to manipulate the returns so as to cheat the Republicans out of their victory.

—The Richmond Dispatch thinks "the New York papers are getting disgustingly local." That is because of the disgusting character of the revelations now being made concerning the management of municipal affairs under a Democratic administration.

—We are glad to observe that in Massachusetts there seems to be a firm determination among the Republicans to redeem the State from the disgrace of Democracy next November. It looks now as though they would concentrate upon Hon. A. H. Rice.

—Speaking of the Philadelphia expriest, Gerdeman, the Courier-Journal says he is "now lecturing for the Republican party against the Roman Catholic Church," a more naive confession that the Democratic party is the party of Papacy would be impossible.

—Ex-Pounder Morrissey is the most conspicuous man in the Democratic party at present, and nearly all the shining lights of that delectable organization are gathering around his hospitable Saratoga faro table, drinking his words of wisdom.

—Had the Kentucky election been postponed a week later, the Democratic majority would not have been so large. "The minions of the Federal Government" have just returned from an invasion of the sacred soil of Owen and Henry counties in that State, in search of Ku-Klux murderers, a number of whom they arrested.

—It is now denied that ex-Governor Scott, of South Carolina, in his recent speech at Napoleon, Ohio, advocated the payment of the Rebel debt and for the emancipated slaves. It is of little consequence whether he did or did not. He has gone over to the reactionary Bourbons, bag and baggage, and will doubtless come to that in time.

—It does seem odd, doesn't it, that both Tilden and Hendricks, on the first stages of their pilgrimage after the Presidency, should land, in the first place, in the gambling saloons of John Morrissey, at Saratoga? They both want to conciliate John; and neither could think of taking a step further without consulting him. The king of the gamblers and the ex-king of the prize-fighters is the chief man of the Democratic party.

—Beck, of Kentucky, who denies that we are a nation, and is a candidate for election to the United States Senate, predicts that the first act of the Democratic House of Representatives, next December, will be to abolish the office of Lieutenant General, and stop Sheridan's salary. The animus of this is plain. Should these truculent reactionists kick up any muss, however, "Little Phil" will be found promptly on hand, salary or no salary.

REPUBLICAN CONVENTION.

The Republican voters of Centre County will meet at the regular places of holding their Delegate Elections, on Saturday, the 21st day of August, at the usual hour, to elect delegates to represent them in the County Convention.

The REPUBLICAN COUNTY CONVENTION will meet in Bellefonte on WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 25,

at 1:30 o'clock p. m., to nominate candidates for the offices to be filled at the next election.

S. D. GRAY,
Chair'n Republican Co. Con.

DO RIGHT, REPUBLICANS.

No nation living up to its political privileges ever recedes from its most advanced position. It rather makes that advanced position the basis for its next effort. The war of the rebellion, like that of the Revolution, which brought us independence nearly a century ago, changed, as it were by its issue, the character of the people. The free America of to-day is not the America of 1860. And as our fathers seized upon liberty and founded a country in which human freedom was to be the topstone of the temple, we have but taken up their work and completed it, and nevermore shall the dark shadow of a slave be seen on these shores. One of the issues of the rebellion threw into prominence the idea of duty, and invested it with a sacredness it had hitherto not attained. Every impediment, therefore, must be removed from the upward path, in order that the citizen may perform it, or be prepared for its performance. It is this high idea of duty, and the responsibility it imposes upon the citizen, that so much concerns us now. Had the founders of the Republic selfishly held back from assisting their foremost men and measures, they would have failed in their enterprise. But they were made of sterner stuff—they were cast in manlier mold; and whenever they could render help, especially at critical moments, they flocked to the front, and joined heart and hand in the work.

A crisis in the history of the Republic is actually upon us. We appeal to every Republican to put aside all personal thoughts; all real or fancied grievances; and to come forth boldly and aid in meeting it. We have no hesitation in saying that a Democratic victory at the next elections will throw the nation back full half a century. Already the neglect of duty by Republicans, which but ten years since, was so grandly performed, has inspired the hopes of the Democratic party that their success in obtaining a majority in the House of Representatives, was not a Republican blunder—or worse, a falling off from the Republican ranks. And what has the Democratic party done to deserve support or sympathy from Republicans? Is is not responsible for the war? Is it not responsible for the public debt, and for the disaffection in the South? Is it not still laying bare its bosom to the late owners of slaves, now free, and asking him to gaze at its sorrow for him? Has it not opposed every Republican measure which the war rendered necessary? Is it not in league with the Romish hierarchy to defeat the public school system and divide the school fund, in return for the solid Catholic vote? Is it not notorious that the rank and file of the Democratic party consist of the most incorrigibly ignorant of the masses, who are taught to despise education, yet whose votes serve to block the way of public progress, and hinder the efforts of the best and the wisest men? Do we not see that such Democrats vote as directed because their leaders have an object to gain?

And what is that object? To revert to the old system of corruption in which they once revelled, while the nation would deteriorate at home and abroad. We ask Republicans to dare to do right. We ask with confidence, because a Republican is able to give an intelligent reason as to the hope that is in him. We ask Republicans to remember their responsibility. On them devolves the duty to take part in all the machinery of the approaching elections. They should be present at the primaries, to select the best men, and, if need be, to become the candidate, to defeat those who would put forward men not to be trusted. In a word, we want them to serve their country with all the ardor of citizens, who know the value of the stake for which they are fighting. Then the success of the Republican party at the next elections will be assured. And the success of the Republican party means the carrying out of all measures designed to elevate the people—the enforcement of the law so as to require obedience from the disaffected—the protection of the working man in his labor, and securing him the fruits of it, whatever may be his color—the opening up of a freer and cheaper communication between the interior States and the seaboard, that the farmer's profit may not be lost in the cost of transportation—the final settlement of all questions of finance, with a view to easing the national burdens, and the prosperity of trade and commerce—the dealing with every pending issue from the standpoint of a restored Union, in which the hearts of the people shall be set upon building up the truest, purest, noblest nation upon the earth.

DIALOGUE ON THE SITUATION.

Democratic Voter—Don't you think that you carried things a little too strong on the 10th of August?

Democratic Editor—No; I did just what I intended to do.

D. V.—But Penns Valley has not had a sheriff for twelve years, and was justly entitled to the nomination.

D. E.—I cannot help that; if they want a sheriff they should not try to get him without my consent. If they do, I will defeat them every time.

D. V.—Are you not afraid that they may refuse to support your candidates?

D. E.—They dare not do it; all they can do is to grumble and threaten, till they get the gas off, but before the election I will have them everyone hurrahing for the ticket, and saying that it is the best nomination ever made in Centre county.

D. V.—How will you be able to do this?

D. E.—I will threaten some, promise some, cajole some, and pull the wool over the eyes of all.

D. V.—But then, there is the treasurer; how do you expect to reconcile poor and laboring men to his nomination so as to secure their support?

D. E.—My dear friend, you seem to understand very little of the character and mental capacity of the working class. Any cock and bull story will do for them; even if they were shown the truth, and I would assert that it was a lie, they would not believe their own eyes, but would swear that it was a lie. I am the workingman's friend, that's what does it. Ha, ha, ha!

D. V.—But why did you have Dan Musser nominated at all, when there were plenty of good men out for the office?

D. E.—It was necessary that I should teach the political men of Centre county, once for all, that I could and would nominate whomsoever I pleased; and it was especially necessary that I might break down the Orvis faction before it amounted to anything.

D. V.—Will the nomination of Musser secure these objects?

D. E.—Certainly; the politicians know now that I did have nominated whom I pleased, and they know that I will continue to do so; and the little Orvis faction is dead as a smoked herring.

D. V.—I intended to speak of others on the ticket, but you have doubtless taken them all into the arrangement.

D. E.—You bet I have; not one of my men can be defeated; I run the machine myself!

D. V.—Good-bye.

D. E.—Good-bye.

——S. D. Gray Esq., Chairman of the Republican County Committee, requests delegates, who will be elected on next, Saturday to the County Convention, which will meet on Wednesday next, (Aug. 25th) to forward their names to his address as early as possible—not later than Tuesday, August 24.

——The general sheriffs' sales will take place on Friday next, at 1 o'clock P. M., in front of the Court House.

THE APOLOGIST OF CRIMINALS AND EXHORTER TO DEEDS OF VIOLENCE.

The Watchman of last week, regales its readers with a sweet morsel of intellectual comment upon the disgraceful mob and riot of a week ago last Saturday, that shamed our town, suited to its special readers. From the Watchman account of the "fracas," as it terms it, we would be led to think that the occurrence was simply a friendly gathering of the special devotees and worshippers of the Watchman editor, and, being brim full of victorious impulses, wanted, in a very harmless and playful manner, to evidence their vivacious and sportive mood, by mobbing a man on the street, and open full wide their vituperative valves and make the welkin ring with the coarsest, most profane and vulgar expletives, with which they were familiar. That the Watchman was bound to excuse and apologize for the drunken blackguardism and riotous conduct, of whom a number, who lay claim to high respectability, were grossly guilty, we fully expected. The servility of the Watchman to its political pimps, and its readiness to prostitute its columns to the vindication of both men and measures, however base and sordid, if, by so doing, the editor may be served a good turn, is notorious in the whole career of the Watchman, and is in just keeping with the truculent trickery of the editor's political career. We are not a great deal staggered or surprised that the Watchman should invoke the summary power, well known to excited mobs, familiar with warfare and ruffianism in the history of our frontier settlements, and Ku-Kluxism in the South, denominated "Judge Lynch," and threaten our dear, precious lives with it. Lynch law, at times, is a good thing. There was a time, had a little been applied to the Watchman office, it might have had a wholesome and purifying effect upon the treasonable sentiment it gave expression to, when it howled "Nigger," "Lincoln hirelings," chisken thieves," etc. Lynch law, however, is seldom invoked, nor can it well be countenanced anywhere, except where the lawless classes are supreme; where crime of all grades defies law and good government, and acknowledges no restraint or authority; where humanity is brutalized and demoralized, and where courts of law and government are powerless to protect the citizen in person and property. But that a newspaper, that lays claim to superiority, and in the midst of a highly christianized and civilized community, where courts of justice are ample and the law sufficiently respected to call every offender and violator of law to account, and visit upon him condign punishment, should, in the light, and under the refining influences of the present day, invite its peculiar cohorts to lynch any man, ought to be a little startling to the community in which we live.

The "Watchman" of last week, threatens us with Judge Lynch, unless we be a little wary in our criticism of men and things. We suppose the "Watchman" fully understands the tone and character of its fighting cohorts, and therefore knows whereof, or by whom it has a right to threaten, and we do not doubt the entire capability of the "Watchman's" peculiar friends, from the exhibition they presented in the mob of a week ago last Saturday night, to form themselves into a court on the shortest notice, and install Judge Lynch on the bench, and perpetrate one of the blackest crimes known to the law. Under the tutorship of the "Watchman" and its lawless teachings and threatenings, and primed with Democratic fighting whiskey, a riotous gathering of the "Watchman's" peculiar friends, we have a right to expect, are ever ready to do anything, howeve shameful, base or criminal.

But we here take pleasure in stating, that so long as we run a newspaper, we will criticise both men and measures, when, in our judgment, they need it; and the public good will be subserved thereby, regardless of the "Watchman," with its fighting cohorts and their friend Judge Lynch. If the peculiar friends and attaches of the "Watchman" office make vile blackguards of themselves, get up riots and mobs, and thus break the peace, and disgrace themselves and our town, we will descant upon it and them, regardless of consequences. So if the "Watchman" editor and his boon companions do not want us to expose them to the public contempt they deserve, let them behave like decent and respectable citizens, and quit playing the rowdy and drunken blackguard. Sic semper balatrones.

THE DEMOCRATIC DICTATOR.

While Jack Spangler was an attache of the "Watchman" office, and before he was admitted to the bar, we predicted that he would be a candidate against Potter for district attorney, and that this job was set up by Meek to defeat his father (Spangler) for sheriff, Munson being Meek's man. The first [illegible] came true at the very next election, and the latter part has been verified by the action of the late Democratic convention. We also cautioned some of the other candidates that they could not be nominated, from the fact that Meek owned the Democratic party, and they were not his (Meek's) candidates. Among these latter was our friend Morrison, who took great offense because we intimated that his "nose was too short," and he would not make it.

Now, ought not this to be a warning to the rank and file of the Democracy of Centre county, that this whole ticket was a ring set-up, when the designs of Meek became known even to Republicans? Why, it is a notorious fact here in Bellefonte, that the day before the Democratic convention met, the people spoke confidently of who would be nominated the next day. And it turned out, in every case, just as it was currently reported upon the streets. No one was disappointed in the result, except the defeated candidates themselves.

Just before the convention met, Meek and his cohorts gathered in Alexander's office and made their plans for the control of the convention. Miller Hall was to be nominated as chairman of the convention, and was to decline in favor of Cyrus T. Alexander, and thus was Alexander to receive his baptismal anew into the Democratic fold, by such old worn-out tricks as these, so plain, that he who runs might read. Are the simple-minded men who do the voting deceived into believing that they have come up to the great city of Bellefonte and made a glorious ticket for the support of the Democracy of old Centre? And the defeated candidates, who have only served as cat's paws for Meek to pull his own chestnuts out of the fire, are charging their defeat to the men and causes that had just nothing at all to do with the matter, and sighing with the poet

"Of all the words of tongue or pen
The greatest are these, I might have been."

and yet it could not have been, for Meek, the dictator of the party, had decided otherwise, and some of these men were too honest to serve his purpose, no doubt. Why did he not tell them months ago,—for some of them were poor men and could ill afford the expense of a useless canvas—that it was no use, and they must wait? Will the Democracy of Centre county longer submit to this debasement. Will the honest Democracy of Pennsvalley longer submit to be lead like so many horses to water? How often shall we repeat to them the story of their thralldom; that they are slaves; slaves to a Bellefonte ring of petty tyrants; a despotic dictatory, rich through the plunder of the treasury by county printing, and only great in that strange spell, a name?

If the Democracy of Pennsvalley, particularly, will longer submit to have their claims set aside, then they are the vilest slaves, and are no longer entitled to consideration or respect; and are only fit to furnish Democratic majority to elect the men set up by the shrewder minds, who control the party on this side of the mountain; and when a candidate is taken from that side of the mountain, it will not be the man the people of that side want, but the man Meek wants, regardless of their wishes.

STATE ITEMS.

—Northampton county built fifteen new school houses last year.

—In Berks county they employ infuriated bulls to guard the huckleberry patches.

—Cherryville, Northampton county, has 260 inhabitants, thirteen of whom are widows.

The Republicans of Luzerne county will hold their nominating convention on the 17th inst.

—They had a race in Scranton on Friday, between a steam road carriage and a horse. The horse won.

The anti-secret society men of Bradford county, have nominated an independent ticket for county officers.

—Eight hundred and three students have attended the State Normal School at Millersville, Lancaster county, during the past year.

—McKean county produces 171 barrels of daily from six wells. The oil is of low gravity, and worth more than the oil produced in the lower river regions.

—The Montour American says it understands Jeff. Davis will be invited to deliver an address before the Montour Agricultural Society, at the fall exhibition.

—The Mauch Chunk "Democrat," in a leader half a column long, enthusiastically suggests the name of Hon. F. S. Dreher, Presiding Judge of that district, as a suitable candidate for Governor.

—The rains last week filled up all the streams in Greene, Washington, Fayette, Westmoreland and other counties, to overflowing, and much damage was done to property along the water courses by the overflow.

—The Sharon Times says: "The introduction of Swedes into our coal Mines, has not been met by our old miners with any spirit of hostility. We are glad to see this as it indicates that the miners are animated by a right spirit."

—The employees in some of the departments of the railroad shops at Altoona, are now working twelve hours per day. This is necessary to hasten the completion of several improved postal cars at present in course of erection.

—A grand tri-State picnic is to be held by the Patrons of Husbandry of Pennsylvania, Maryland and West Virginia, at Williams Grove, Cumberland county, on the 26th inst. The railroads will sell excursion tickets at reduced rates.

—A wild cat was shot near the Schuylkill bridge at Monocacy, by Geo. Updegrove, of that place, on Tuesday evening. It was as large as a good-sized dog, and was going in the direction of and evidently making its way to the Monocacy hills.

—It is said that the Pennsylvania Railroad will put on a fast train to beat the New York and Chicago fast mail. As the Pennsylvania has a shorter route, it is probable that the Government will find itself "involved in confusion" by patronizing the New York Central.

—The Franklin Spectator says: William H. Johnston, of French Creek township, Venango county, died on Tuesday morning. We spoke of him some weeks ago as the oldest man in Venango county and perhaps in the United States. He was a colored man, formerly a slave and according to record was 130 years old last February.

—There are some things in the address of the Republican State Committee which the Democratic editors say they do not understand. We don't see, however, how it will be possible for the Committee to send a person around to enlighten these ignoramuses, who keep right on attacking the free school system.—[Williamsport Gazette.

—The Democratic papers, having discovered that it is useless to charge the Republican officers of the State government with misuse of the sinking fund, are beginning now to abuse them for paying off the debt so rapidly. The Commissioners have extinguished the debt as rapidly as they could do under warrant of the law, and they have done it with money which was specially set aside for that purpose. If the taxes by which the money was obtained are too heavy, it is the business of the Legislature to make them lighter. We, however, consider them very light already, and there is not any popular demand that we know of that they should be further reduced until the debts of the State are paid. The trouble with the Democrats is that we have reduced the State debt from forty millions, and that is a very much more rapid decrease than the Democrats like to see under a Republican administration which will win credit for its action.—Philadelphia Bulletin.

——This is the last article we'll write for this edition of the REPUBLICAN, and if anybody is mad at what we've done let him give us five minutes notice and we'll—get under cover like the Pope's Malkin.

——Have you tried Green's Peruvian Beer? It is delicious, only five cents a glass.

——Last week we had sufficient rain; it came down daily in torrents, with occasional intervals for refreshments. Showers came up almost imperceptibly and would issue from the clouds without notice to creditors or anybody else, while rainbows were as popular as judgment notes with five per cent. added for collection.

Poetry.

Love and Rest.

"Love is sweeter than rest."—H. TIMROD.

"Rest will soon be granted, dear—
Think of all the bliss
When you reach that brighter sphere,
Lifted free of all this!
Home, and rest, and palms, and peace!
Verily, such gain,
O'er the losses of release,
Balances the pain!"

"Yea; but human love to me
Is so near divine,
That my heart clings yearningly
Even to life like mine.
Love is sweeter far than rest—
That alone I know—
And the soul that loves me best
Will not let me go."

"Home, and rest, and heaven, dear—
Love is in them all;
Tenderest love is given, dear,
In the Saviour's call;
He would lift your face to his,
Fold you to his breast,
Teach you what a crowning 'tis
When he offers rest!"

"Rest is sweet—how well I know
Rest that follows care—
When the tired sun droppeth low,
And beside my chair
Listens one while I repeat,
By her love caressed;
Ah, my darling, love is sweet,
Sweeter even than rest!"

"Yet, beloved, more than we Understand, he gives
Unto him who trustfully
In his promise lives,
Measure all the bliss we can,
Still must be believed
Never has the heart of man
Perfect joy conceived!"

"True, oh true, and well I mark
All your words would teach—
And my soul beyond the dark
Stretches forth to reach,
Faith yet fuller, more complete,
While my lips attest
It is love makes heaven sweet—
Love is more than rest!"

When You're Down.

What legion of "friends" always bless us
When golden success lights our way!
How they smile as they softly address us,
So cordial, good humored and gay!
But oh! when the sun of prosperity
Hath set, then how quickly they frown,
And cry out, in tones of severity,
Kick the man, don't you see he is down?

What though when you knew not a sorrow,
Your heart was open as day,
And your "friends," when they wanted to borrow,
You'd oblige—and ne'er ask them to "pay!"
What though not a soul ever slighted,
As you meandered about through the town?
Your "friends become very near sighted,
And don't seem to see you when down!

When you're "up," you are loudly exalted,
And trusers all sing out your praise;
When you're down, you have greatly defaulted,
And they really "don't fancy your ways."
Your style was "up-top" when you'd money,
So sings every sucker and clown;
But now, 'tis exceedingly funny,
Things are altered, because you're down!

Oh! give me the heart that forever
Is free from the world's selfish rust,
And the soul, whose high, noble endeavor,
Is to raise fallen men from the dust.
And when, in adversity's ocean,
A victim is likely to drown,
All hail to the friend whose devotion
Will lift up a man when he's "down."

Our Story Teller.

The Green Pocket-Book.

John Singleton stood clinging to the strap of a street-car. As the last lady rose to get out, a small green book became visible, half hidden by the folds of her gown.

"I beg pardon—you have dropped something," said John, picking it up.

"Sir!"

"This book—you dropped it."

The old lady looked acidly, first at the book and then at John. "The article is not mine," she remarked, frigidly. Then she got out.

Mr. Singleton's first impulse was to hand the book to the conductor, but a glance at that worthy's face checked him. "Better advertise," he thought; and signaling the car to stop, alighted in the mud of upper Broadway.

His landlady opened the door in a nervous flutter. "Oh, sir, it's you at last. There's a telegraphic boy been waiting for you ever so long."

Sure enough, there sat the boy; and the result of his message was that in half an hour John Singleton was speeding on his way to western New York by a night express, a hastily-packed sachel under his feet, and his head full of other business than that of finding owners to lost property. The little green pocket-book remained behind in the pocket of the office coat flung aside at the moment of departure.

There it might have remained for months, if diving one day, man-fashion, after some lost article, his fingers had not happened to encounter it. This was a fortnight or so after his return.

"Hallo! what's this!" he said. It was a moment before he recollected. "Bless me! this is too bad. I had forgotten the thing completely. I must be looking up the owner if there's enough in it to pay for advertisement."

He released the elastic strap and opened the pages. There was no money, no place for any. The little book was a diary, shabby, green-bound, with no name on the title page. Most of the leaves were blank, a few only being scribbled over in a light girlish hand-writing. John glanced over these in search of a clew, and pretty soon growing interested, drew a chair to the fire, and proceeded to read regularly. The diary began:

"October 5.—Last night Alice and Tom and I went to Dr. Bellow's lecture. It was interesting."

"October 8.—I have been making my winter bonnet, or rather warming over the old one, for it is Alice's turn to have the new this year. She ought to always, she has to see such stylish people in the houses where she teaches. The old brown felt doesn't look bad, considering it is its third appearance. I've steamed the velvet, and curled the feather with a hot penknife, and tucked in a little blue bow, and Tom says its 'gorgeous.' Tom is always funny about my things."

"The pudding Tom likes so much!"

"Take eight large baking apples, pare, core, and lay them in a deep dish. Put a little sugar and a mite of cinnamon in each. Soak a teaspoonful of tapioca in a quart of lukewarm water for an hour, then pour on, and bake till the apples are pink and tender. Milk and sugar."

"Marianna gave me this recipe. Tom says he wishes he could have it three times a week, but I tell him apples are very expensive."

"November 1.—I've been to a party, quite a large one. It was at the Almy's. Ellen Almy asked me, and papa said I might for once, because it did no harm to see the vanity of things. I think the vanity of things are very pleasant! There was a great discussion over what I should wear. Alice invented a trimming for my poplin cut of mamma's old blue silk, and lent me her locket and a pocket-handkerchief trimmed with edging. Alice is so dear! I left my hair down my back because Tom likes it best so, and the blessed boy made me a present of a pair of new gloves—kids, pale yellow, with two buttons. I nearly cried over them, the poor fellow has so little money; but he said Flossy must be 'swell,' cost what it might. I had a rose for my hair off Alice's bush, and altogether regarded myself as very fine, until I reached the Almy's; then, as papa would say, I found my level, for the girls were gorgeous. Lily in white silk, Ellen in lovely pink crape, with hair pow[illegible]. Oh, I can't pretend to remember, but they looked beautiful. After all, I had just as nice a time, for I danced every dance, in spite of my old blue, the German included. Such a kind, pleasant boy took me into supper, and I spoiled my gloves by getting ice cream on the thumb. Alice has put on benzine, but they won't ever look so nice again. However, I never expect to go to any more parties, so, except for their being dear Tom's present, it doesn't matter."

"Why, what a baby this is," soliloquized John Singleton, at this point. "I didn't know that there were any such girls left."

November 10.—Studied, read, practiced, made gems for tea. Papa called them capital."

"November 15.—Ditto, ditto.

"Christmas day.—'The owl for all his feathers is a-cold.' Just come from church. We decided not to give any presents to each other this year, but spend the tiny bit we could spare on Mrs. Maloney and the chicks. Tom presented me with his India rubber pencil, Mr. Squires having given him a new one."

"May 2.—How long it is since I wrote anything in my diary! All our time has gone to papa. He is better now; but how frightened we have been! It makes me shiver to recollect it. What could we do without papa? Now summer is here, and he will grow strong. Alice and I have lost so much sleep that we are drowsy as owls."

"June 5.—Papa is better, but Alice is all tired out. How hard it is to be poor when anybody is sick! I don't mind it in well times."

"August 10.—Papa feels a little weaker, but the doctor says it may be only the heat. I was thinking just now of the sea, the long, cool roll of the breakers and the swash, the gulls driving and plunging, the crunching of the sand underfoot, hard, yet soft. How delicious it would be to feel it all again! Perhaps I shall dream about it to-night."

"August 11.—No; I dreamed instead that we were frying doughnuts in a hot kitchen. What a midsummer's dream! I am afraid I have a vulgar mind!

"October 4.—How little I guessed when I wrote such foolish words what was going to happen! Papa is dead. It was the 17th of September. I can't write about it yet. Oh, papa!

"Christmas again. Such a sad day. We three have been sitting over the register all the afternoon, and making our plans. Papa's life insurance is all we have to live on now. Tom must give up being a doctor, and take a clerk's place. Mr. Squires has found one for him. He is very brave, and does not say one word to show how disappointed he is; but we all know. I have written to ask Mrs. Morris to find me a place to teach children. Alice says I am too young, but I feel old, and if the children are not very big, I think I can manage. Anything is better than letting Alice work so hard. If no place opens as teacher, I shall try for something else, for do something I must.

"January 17.—Nothing yet, and dear, dear Alice has been ill for three weeks. She is a little better, or I don't know what I should do.

"March 17.—I have heard of a place in a shop"—

Here the writing broke off abruptly. John hastily turned over the remaining pages. Not another word, except, in pencil near the end, "Black ribbon, thirty-seven cents; boy at crossing, three cents; oranges for Alice, six cents;" and underneath a single line: "Patience isn't always pleasant, but she leads to pleasant things."

"Here's a pretty business!" he soliloquized, stowing the little book in his breast pocket. "As well search for a needle in a haystack as for this girl out of all New York city. Why can't women write their names and addresses in full while they are about it?"

He took up a newspaper, but the letters danced before his eyes, and before long he had pulled the green book out again and was rereading the journal. An old excitement stirred his pulses. For a good many years—in fact, since the age of nineteen, when his first love jilted him—he had counted himself a determined old bachelor, and having no mother or sister, had drifted out of the way of womankind and their interests. "Flossy's" simple record seemed to bring him back to this forgotten world. It was as if a girl had sat down by his side and whispered her secrets in his ear. Visions of a sweeter tired face behind a counter, of appealing blue eyes (he was certain they must be blue), of a veil of soft light hair (hair to match the eyes), swept over him, and all his knighthood was roused. Find her he must and help her; but how? Never did search seem more unpromisingly devoid of clew.

To advertise was, of course, his first thought. "Found, a small green pocketbook," appeared next day among the "Personals," and was reiterated so many times thereafter as to become, as it were, a permanant feature of the paper. A singular rage for shopping seized upon John. Every afternoon, leaving his office early, he betook himself to this amusement, choosing always those shops where women were employed. No bride elect, with a trousseau to buy, ever went into the business more determinately. Long stairs daunted him not; he penetrated third stories, to fourth, even to those mysterious topmost regions where "ladies' outfitting" is attended to. Everywhere he questioned: "Have you among your employees a young lady named Florence? I have accidentally come into possession of an article belonging to her which I am anxious to return."

But no one answered the advertisement; and though more than one Florence turned up in the shops, they were not the one, they had no connection with the little green pocket-book.

So May passed, and June and July, and when August drew on, and the city became a great focus of baking walls and evil savors, our friend, tough and active as he was, began to feel need of change. "Flossy's" words haunted him. "The long, cool roll and the swash, the gulls diving and plunging in the spray;" they filled him with longing for the sea. He resolved on a vacation; and one sultry evening, after an hour's bumping on the railway, and a further jolt in a country wagon, he found himself at "Oriental Point," on the Long Island shore; a spot which had rejoiced in the name of Clam Cove until a recent rechristening at the hands of local speculators, whose imaginations, fired by the completion of the branch railroad, had jumped forward to anticipated hotels and a crowd of metropolitan "boarders." Both hotels and crowd were happily non-existent so far, and the sylvan quiet of Clam Cove still brooded over Oriental Point. The red farmhouses scattered along the beach sufficed for the few strangers who had found out the place, and in one of these Mr. Singleton and his knapsack were received and welcomed with a hearty country hospitality which it was to be feared would disappear with the nearer approach of the ubiquitous steam whistle.

Two days of basking in sun and salt, two nights of cool freshness, made him a new man. Utterly lazy, he felt indisposed for everything but to lie under the shade of rocks, watch the water come and go, and nap and dream.

It was on the fourth day of this oyster-like existence that he roused from a dozing reverie at the sound of voices speaking near. Some ladies had seated themselves just below him. One, dressed in mourning and wrapped in a shawl, seemed an invalid. The other had dark red-brown hair streaming down over a cool-looking white and black dress. She was reading aloud Lowell's little poem, "Sea Weed." John caught the words distinctly.

"I wonder what that means exactly?" she said as she finished.

"It is very graceful"—

"Yes, but it's puzzling, too—a fascinating puzzle. I'm always wondering if Mr. Lowell, when he wrote it, meant the same thing which I fancy he meant. It quite teases me."

"And yet you like it so much!"

"Oh, that's the very reason. I like to be teased and set to thinking. Alice are you warm enough?"

John picked up his ears. But this girl has dark hair.

"Thanks—yes. I'm almost warm enough. Still, you might fetch the gray shawl, Marion, if you don't mind.

John caught a glimpse of the girl's face as she came back with the shawl, a fresh, pleasant face, with eyes of the same red-brown as the hair. She saw him, too, and the sisters lowered their voices. He did not hear another word after that.

Two days later his landlady met him with a troubled countenance.

"I'm so sorry!" she began. "It's just as sudden on me's on you but my daughter she's written that she and the children must come home for a spell 'cause the youngest's had cholera infaticide and the doctor says they must get away's fast's they can and it's too bad to turn you out but I don't see no other way to fix it and if you don't mind Elkins next door has a room every bit like the one you're in now and Almiry shall carry over your things and you'll be every whit as comfortable and I hope you'll have no hard feeling about it." All this in a breath, and without audible punctuation.

John comforted the good dame, whose face was full of trouble. After all, what did it matter! "Almiry" lent a hand, and in two hours he was seated in Mrs. Elkin's front room, "every bit as comfortable" as he had been in his old quarters.

Going down to dinner, the red-brown eyes which he had noticed on the bench confronted him.

"It's the Miss Whittemores, Mr.—I don't recall your name," remarked Mrs. Elkin's, spooning out her steaming chowder. And in this unceremonious way the introduction was effected.

Intimacies ripen fast under such circumstances. Reading, sailing, and walking together, spending whole days and day after day in company, it was no wonder that before long the three so lately strangers should become as old friends. It was easy to know the Misses Whittemore, they were so frank and simple, so pleasantly well-bred. Alice, the eldest, a gentle, womanly creature, quiet in speech and manner, and full of a certain sweet common-sense, was evidently the object of fondest care to the brown-eyed Marion. John had never known any girls like them. It was a revelation of the pleasant possibilities of life to be in such contact. Still, his shyness and old habit of distrust hampered and held him back. "What man ever understood a woman?" he asked himself. "I don't pretend to. Flossy, indeed! I did have a real glimpse of her in that blessed little book! Now if some fairy would just open a door and let me see the inside of Marion's heart in the same way, I should know where I was."

Marion! Yes, the imaginary Flossy was dethroned; the real Marion reigned in her stead. John, however, was still unconcious of his subjugation, and how long the affair might have halted, no one can tell, had not fate, as she often does, taken the matter into her own hands.

"My brother is coming down for Sunday," said Alice one morning.

"Have you a brother.

"Oh yes. Have we never told you about him? Poor boy! it is his first vacation this summer. We have wished for him so often, and now at last he can come.

John watched the sisters curiously as they made ready for their walk to the depot that afternoon, but he did not offer to accompany them. "Lucky fellow!" he muttered, with a sigh, and fell to gnawing his mustache, sure sign of uneasiness and emotion.

By-and-by, they came back, each holding an arm of a broad-shouldered, merry-faced youth, who walked between with face of entire contentment.

"My brother, Mr. Singleton," said Alice, in her gentle voice, as John rose to greet them.

"Happy to know you," said the newcomer, shaking hands cordially, "The girls have written about you till I feel as if we were acquainted. I say, what a beach! Can't we have a sail this evening, Flossy?"

John started as if shot.

"I thought your name was Marion," he said, confusedly, staring like one in a dream.

"Yes, so it is," she answered, carelessly; "but my middle name is Florence, and Tom called me Floss always when we were little. he does now sometimes."

"You really must leave it off!" said Alice. "Flossy is absurd for a grown-up person."

"I'm rather fond of it," remarked Marion; "it doesn't seem absurd to meat all."

"It's beautiful!" jerked out John, still absorbed in the suddenness of his surprise. Marion looked at him, astonished. He felt himself under her gaze, but offered no explanation, and the subject was dropped.

The real and ideal rarely combine in life. When they do, only one conclusion seems possible. Events flew rapidly after this eclaricissement. The course of true love has intervals of smooth running, for all the poets may say to the contrary. The bright hunter's moon of that year looked down on two extremely happy people, and when Christmas gladness dawned on the earth, it found them happier still.

It was on the first delicious evening spent in their new home that John broke silence and told the story of his treasure-trove. They sat together by the fireside, and Flossy turned the worn pages of the diary with a tender touch.

"Dear shabby old thing!" she murmured. "Yet it brought us together!"

"And to think how I searched for you in all the shops of the city!"

"Shops? Oh I didn't go to the shop, you know. Aunt Marion died the very week after I wrote that, and left me two hundred dollars because I was named for her. I felt so rich to be able to take Alice to the seashore. How little we guessed, when you came, and we grew to be friends, that all that time you had my old diary in your pocket!"

"And how little I guessed that the 'Flossy' I had hunted for and dreamed about was close at hand! You'll make me Tom's pudding some day, won't you, although "apples are expensive?"

Marion raised the little green book to her lips and kissed it. Then she kissed John.

Murder Will Out.

A French Detective's Story.

I was stopping at the Hotel Windsor, in the Rue de Rivoli, Paris. One morning, I was smoking in the colonade, when a tall, elegantly-dressed gentleman asked permission to light his cigar by mine. I saw at a glance that he was a Frenchman, although his "English" was nearly perfect.

"Have you heard the news?" he inquired.

"No!"

"It is impossible? Why, all Paris is alive with it at this moment."

"What has happened?"

"The Countess De Marville, the fairest of the fair, was found murdered in her bed last night, her bureau broken open, and ten thousand francs missing from it. Ah! it was terrible! There were marks of fingers on her throat. The brute who did the deed effected his entrance through the window of her chamber—near which, unfortunately, was a tree, planted years ago by the distinguished grandfather of the Countess. Little did he imagine the terrible use that would be made of it!"

"This is bad news. How any man could harm a woman thus in cold blood is more than I can imagine."

"Ah, Monsieur! if you had seen the Countess, you would wonder still more. She was beautiful as an angel!" he added, stroking his whiskers with an unmistakable vanity. "I knew her well."

"Indeed!"

"Oh, yes! There are in Paris few popular woman unknown to me."

His manner now was decidedly conceited, and I felt disgusted with him. My coldness evidently repelled him, for he soon left me. Afterward I heard other accounts of the tragedy. Among the details of the affair was one that peculiarly impressed me, and which my first informant had not spoken of, an oversight that surprised me, as the occurrence he had not mentioned was of that kind which would be more apt to strike the fancy; upon the throat of the Countess, the murderer, in trottling her, had left a mark from a ring he wore—the impression of a chariot-wheel, with a star in the centre.

"This," said my latest informant, "may lead to the discovery of the murderer. Jean Mosqueau is already visiting the jewelers' shops to find out from which, and by whom, a ring with the chariot-wheel device was purchased."

"Who is Jean Mosqueau?"

"What, monsieur! Have you not heard of Masqueau, our famous detective? Although his courage is well-known, you would not, to look at his fair, quiet face, and delicate form, believe that he could fight a gnat."

A week later, I was on board the steamer bound from Calais to Dover. Among the passengers, I beheld one whose face had a familiar look. I was not long in recognizing this person as the same I had seen in front of the Hotel Windsor, and who had first informed me of the murder of the Countess. He was certainly a very handsome man, although his conceited air was a blot upon his good looks. He moved languid hither and thither—now and then turning his brown eyes admiringly upon the pretty lady passengers, while stroking his whiskers with one hand, upon the middle of which was a superb diamond ring. I am of a rather suspicious nature, which combined with a lively imagination, has often led me into singular errors. Now a strange impulse moved me to advance and hold out my hand to a man whom I had involuntarily disliked from the first, in order that I might have a chance to glance at the ring. Somehow the idea had possessed me that I should discover chariot-wheel device upon the glittering bauble. The stranger did not at first recognize me. He soon did, however, and frankly extended his hand—which was not the one containing the ring. My brain fairly reeled—the man's behavior was conviction of my suspicions.

"The other hand, if you please," I said, in a low, stern voice.

"Monsieur will excuse me, if he pleases. My other arm is lame with rheumatism."

He saw me glance at the half-hidden ring, and I was sure I saw him start and turn pale while at the same time looking much surprised. He, however, opened his right hand, as if perfectly willing for me to shake it, if I choose. Then I had a good look at the ring, and felt ashamed of my suspicion. The device was a common heart, which certainly bore no resemblance to a chariot-wheel. After a little general conversation, to recover self-possession, I turned away resolving in future to have a better opinion of my fellow creatures.

The stranger's good looks seemed to attract the attention of the ladies. One, especially—a modest-looking little thing, attired in black—kept directing furtive glances at the handsome stranger. Finally she glided so close to him that, in turning, he brushed against her. An apology, smilingly received by the little lady, a remark about the weather on the part of the gentleman, and the two were soon conversing with animation. Meanwhile the blushing cheek and bright eyes of the fair one seemed to betoken that she was well pleased with her companion, whose air was now more conceited than ever.

"I am afraid that we shall have a "storm," she remarked, pointing toward a dark cloud upon which the Captain of the boat was gazing anxiously.

"We may; but do not feel alarmed, madame."

With an air of nonchalence, he pulled a red cigar-case from his pocket, asked his companion if she objected to smoke, and, being answered negatively, opened the case. Then he started, and quickly returning this to his pocket, pulled forth another of blue color.

"How many cigars do you smoke in a day?" inquired the lady, evidently amused at the sight of two cases.

The other colored. It struck me that his voice faltered slightly, and his hand trembled, as he made some laughing retort.

Soon the storm came pouncing down upon us. We were midway in the channel, so that we caught the full force of the sea and gale. Both were terrific. The sea swept the boat, which lay so far over that her machinery was soon damaged so that it could not work. The wind, screaming like a demon, threw it still over. Suddenly we observed the sailors endeavoring to loosen the long-boat on davits astern. Meanwhile there was an ominous grinding, smashing noise under the counter. The truth could not be concealed—we were sinking. The ladies screamed, the passengers lost their self-possession, and ran wildly hither and thither. Meanwhile, the cool behavior of the little lady in black, contrasted strangely with the agitated demeanor of those around her. There she stood, calm and immovable, her bright, steel-blue eyes fixed upon the handsome stranger, of whom she did not lose sight for a moment.

"Keep quiet, ladies and gentlemen," sang out the Captain. "Keep quiet, do not crowd around the boat so. There will be room enough for all; and, besides, there is a schooner coming to our assistance," pointing to a vessel coming toward us before the wind.

There was, however, a panic among those addressed. The moment the boat was lowered, into it they scrambled, among them the handsome stranger. A huge sea coming, roaring like thunder, tore the boat from the steamer before either the lady in black or I could enter it. The handsome passenger, losing his balance, fell over the gunwale, and being unable to swim, wildly threw up his arms. I acknowledge that I was so engrossed with the perilous situation of my companion and myself, now the only two left aboard the steamer, that I paid little attention to the drowning man.

The steamer was, in fact, going down fast—was already nearly engulfed in the stormy waves, her heated and half-submerged boilers hissing, as the steam came gushing out like the spout from a whale.

I was advancing to throw an arm around the little lady, fearing to see her washed away, when, quietly and coolly motioning me back with one hand, she seized a coil of rope and threw the end to the handsome stranger. He caught it, when, turning to me, the lady requested me to help haul the man aboard. I obeyed, marvelling at the love and devotion thus shown by a woman toward an acquaintance of an hour.

His power over the female sex must be great, I thought. He was conceited, but not without reason. This idea flashed clearly across my mind, in spite of my danger. The schooner, however, was now quite near, and I had every reason to belive we should be picked up.

I was right. We were all taken aboard the schooner, the handsome passenger with the rest. Then the lady in black, quietly pulling forth a revolver, pointed it at the head of him whom she had rescued.

"Out with that red cigar-case!" she said, sternly. "I would like to see what monsieur carries in it."

"Why—why?" stammered the stranger, "what is——"

Before he could say another word, the little amazon, thrusting her disengaged hand into his pocket, pulled forth the red cigar-case, and opening it, a ring dropped to the deck. The ring she picked up, holding it before us all, and exclaimed:

"I have found it at last. The jeweler assured me it was the only kind of the device in all Paris—a chariot wheel! This person is the murderer of Countess De Marville."

The handsome passenger stood as if frozen to the deck, making no resistance as the lady in black slipped a pair of handcuffs over his wrists.

"By what right," he then stammered, "do you——"

He paused, as the other threw off her dress and false hair, revealing the person of a slender man, with delicate, girlish features.

"I am Jean Mosqueau, the detective," he quietly remarked; "and I robbed the waves of this rascal that the scaffold might not be cheated."

"There is little to add. The main proff having been obtained, other proofs, on the prisoner's trial, were brought forth, showing him guilty beyond a doubt.

Long before his execution, his name was ascertained to be Louis Bosseman—a noted adventurer and gambler, who, however, by cool effrontery and a winning address, backed by his good looks, had been enabled to move among the first circles of Parisian society.

THOSE who have any doubts about the particular class to be benefitted by hard money resumption should read over the resolutions adopted by the convention of bankers at Saratoga yesterday. They are in favor of immediate resumption, which means of course contraction to a still more ruinous extent than has already been practiced. Whatever tends to make money scarce is to the advantage of the bankers, because it gives them a better opportunity to practice usury.

BISMARK gave the peasantry on his estates right to do their own harvesting before doing his, rather than have them labor on the Sabbath. Result: his work was done better than before.

MAGNIFICENT OFFER!

Sewing Machines Given Away.—Subscribe for The Bellefonte Republican, the Liveliest and Best Paper in Centre Co. A Sixty Dollar Machine of the Best Make in the World for 30 Names.

A very liberal contract, which we have just completed with the Weed Sewing Machine Company, will enable us, we hope, to place their celebrated machines in many families throughout the country. So fine an opportunity to secure a first-class sewing machine seldom occurs. May we not expect the friends of this paper to make an earnest, united effort to extend greatly its circulation, and thus help to increase its influence? We will liberally reward those who work for us. Reader, can you not form a club in your neighborhood and secure this sewing machine premium? A few hours of well-directed effort will obtain it. Postmasters in the smaller towns and villages can, with a little thought and effort, easily send us the requisite number of names. Has the parsonage a sewing machine? If not, call upon a few ladies and gentlemen of the congregation. Tell them your plan and ask them to help you. In the congregation 30 names can, with little difficulty, be secured. Send us the $60 and we will forward for one year this paper to each of the 30 subscribers, which will pay them the full value of their subscriptions, and in addition, we will make a present, to any person you may designate, of a beautiful sixty dollar Sewing Machine. How easily a club may be formed in the Masonic or Odd Fellows or Temperance Society, or in the Grange? Is there not depending upon your society some poor widow to whom a sewing machine would be for years to come a blessing? Pass the subscription paper. Thirty persons subscribing for this journal at $2.00 each, will secure for themselves, without any extra charge, the paper for one year, and a most valuable present for some needy family. TRY IT, FRIENDS. DON'T WAIT! BEGIN THE WORK AT ONCE! Send us word that you have undertaken the formation of such a club.

Remember, the machines are warranted to be perfectly new, latest improved, and in perfect order.

OUR ASSOCIATED PRESS LETTER.

PHILADELPHIA Aug. 18, 1875.

ANDREW JOHNSON.

In the early part of August, 1866, a few days after the adjournment of Congress, which did not take place that year until the last week in July, President Johnson appointed Hon. Wm. F. Johnston Collector of the Port of Philadelphia. The latter gentleman had been Governor of Pennsylvania, and at the time of his appointment, was stopping at the Continental Hotel, in this city. Governor Johnston's commission was mailed to him on a Friday, from the executive mansion, and he should have received it on Saturday morning; but, being addressed thus: "Hon. Wm. F. Johnston, Philadelphia, Pa.," and the letter carriers probably not knowing that the official document was intended for Governor Johnston, delivered it to a lawyer named Wm. F. Johnson—without the T. This lawyer, Johnson, thinking it a fine opportunity to air his wit, sent the letter back to the President, with an insulting note accompanying it, declining to accept office under a President who had proven false to the party who had elevated him to the high office, etc., etc. To make the insult more marked, Johnson published the contents of his note in Forney's Press. On the Sunday following, I went down to Washington, and took with me a letter from Governor Johnston to the President, in which was a slip from the Press, containing lawyer Johnson's witticism and Governor Johnston's regret that the mistake had occurred. After getting breakfast, I went immediately to the White House, and was about going up stairs to the Executive office, when I was stopped by a guard, who informed me that I could not go up until after ten o'clock. It was then about 8:30 a. m. I remarked that it was not necessary for me to go up, but having an important letter for the President, would he be kind enough to take it to him? In less than two minutes the President came to the head of the stairs, and called my name, and I was immediately taken up to his office. Kindly did the President, who had just read the insulting publication of the Philadelphia lawyer, tell me to be seated. The President then said: "Do you know this man Johnson?" I answered, "I do, sir." "Has he any right to the prefix Hon.?" asked the President, and I replied that he had not. "Do you think Collector Thomas aided Johnson in writing his declination of an appointment that was never intended for him?" queried the President. I replied that Col. Wm. E. Thomas was an honorable man, and would scorn to do anything a thousandth part as contemptible. "I am glad of that," slowly and coldly came from the President's lips.

During all this time, the President's Secretary—Col. Long, I believe he was named—was busy placing Gov. Johnston's returned commission and oath of office, and possibly some other papers, in another envelope, with the view of handing them to me to personally present them to Gov. Johnston. As Col. Long was about to hand me the package, the President said: "Who is the postmaster at Philadelphia?" I told him it was C. A. Walborn. Then, turning to his Secretary, the President remarked: "Colonel, you will please mail that communication to Gov. Johnston." I then said to Col. Long that Gov. Johnston was stopping at the Continental Hotel, and if he would address him accordingly, it would be sure to fall into his hands. "I will do so," said the Secretary.

"How was your first letter addressed?" inquired the President of his Secretary. "Send this one precisely as you did the other, and we will see if the postmaster at Philadelphia will permit this thing to be done a second time," were the words that fell slowly, one by one, from the President's lips, with as measured regularity as a steam hammer, and seemingly with as much force.

I will only add that Walborn wanted to retain the postmastership of Philadelphia, for it pays $500 a month, and the infamy was not a second time perpetrated.

I mention this matter for the purpose of showing the force of character of the man, and the dignified manner in which he treated an insult.

THE CENTENNIAL.

It is gratifying to be able to announce that every building now in course of erection at the Centennial grounds, designed for Exhibibition purposes, will be completed by the time designated by the Board of Finance in their contract with the builders.

The German Consul at Boston, now traveling through Germany on leave of absence, writes to Mr. John Welsh, President of the Centennial Board of Finance, as follows:

"I confirm to you the fact of the very great interest which I find all classes in Germany and Austria are taking in the Centennial Exposition. To speak quite openly, it has struck me and others that the interest taken in the Centennial in Germany and in this part of the world, surpasses the interest taken by the people of America—of course, outside of Pennsylvania. I am told the same interest prevails in France. I think you can count on an enormous concourse of people from all quarters of the globe, and I also think there will be considerable rivalry between the various countries of Europe to make the best exhibit of their products."

GENERAL ITEMS.

MRS. WOODFORD, residing on Moore street, west of Broad, visited a liquor store in the neighborhood and ordered some whisky sent to her residence; when she returned, about two hours later, she found that she had been robbed of diamonds valued at $2000, and $400 in cash. It is surmised that when she ordered the liquor, a man who was formerly in her employ, named Hurley, heard her remark that she would not be home for two or three hours, and that he immediately went to the house and committed the theft.

The Mayor of our city, Hon. Wm. S. Stockley, has, through his chief of police, been putting the hackmen of our city through a course of law anything but agreeable to them. City ordinances require that each cab shall be numbered, and the rates of fare from one point to another posted up in each hack. Very few of them did this, and the hackmen of Philadelphia have long been a reproach at home and a disgrace abroad; but this action of the Mayor has opened a new chapter in the hack business, and the fleecing of strangers by the hacks promises to be one of the lost arts of this city.

We had a terrific tornado here about the middle of the week, in the north-western part of the city. It began at Twenty-third and Race streets, and extended less than one square east and west of Twenty-third street, while it swept northward about one mile and a half. The damage amounted to many thousands of dollars; at least twenty houses were unroofed: several were blown down; chimneys were tumbled about like children's block houses; one large tree was uprooted and carried a considerable distance; one depot roof was blown off to the extent of forty feet square, and 2,000 feet of tin roofing on the same building was ripped off like a sheet of paper and carried about two hundred yards distant; awning posts were snapped in two like pipe-stems; horses and wagons were overturned; and altogether we have scarcely ever experienced such a short, sharp and decisive blow as this.

Philadelphia is rapidly moving to the front again as the first commercial and industrial city of the Union. Last year New York city had a larger molasses importation than any other city of the United States. This year we have far outstripped New York, leading her by about 23,000 hogsheads. In other words, Philadelphia increased her importation of molasses about 20 per cent. over the same period of 1874, and New York fell off just 30 per cent. Boston also fell off about 20 per cent., and Baltimore increased her molasses imports 5,774 hogsheads.

On Saturday, James Smith was arrested at Third and Callowhill, about noon, in an entirely nude state. Smith informed the officer that his clothes had been stolen while he was bathing; but the whelp was walking around the block for a wager that he had just previously made in a beer saloon. He was held in $1000 bail for his appearance at Court to answer the charge of indecent exposure.

The Produce Exchange Association of this city complains that its members suffer greatly from the large number of itinerant dealers who come here with butter, eggs, poultry, and other articles bought up in the country districts, and who dispose of the same without the expense of stores, clerks, etc., and that have no regular place of business they escape the mercantile taxes. The Produce Association announces itself ready to co-operate with the Mercantile Appraisers in forcing these dealers to pay taxes.

The Peach Growers Association will make their first shipment of peaches to Europe on the 26th day of August. They advise growers to send their best peaches, as the success of the movement will depend largely upon the first impression made abroad. The Old mixon variety of peaches has been suggested as the best for the first shipment.

The police of our city arrested 3,227 persons during the month of July; of this number 1,921 were Irish, and the balance "scattering."

Lawrence Monan, a shoemaker at 502 Germantown Avenue, enticed Lena Byerly, a pretty little child of twelve years of age, into his shop, where under threats he forced her to drink some drugged whisky, after which he committed a nameless assault upon her. The child's screams subsequently brought in some neighbors, who arrested Monan and took him to the lock-up. Medical examination showed that the girl was very seriously injured.

J. W. F.

Hon. Wm. D. Kelly.

Our Philadelphia correspondent has interviewed Judge Kelly on board a ferry boat, and this is what was said:

A few days ago, in crossing the Delaware on one of our ferry boats, I found myself seated beside Judge Kelly. remarked to him that as the press, with one or two noticeable exceptions, had ceased to ridicule his financial proposition, and were beginning to discuss its measures fairly, I thought it a fitting time for him to briefly point out its leading merits.

The Judge replied that his "3.65 incontrovertible bond" proposition meant nothing more nor less than that the "Government by the people" shall receive the money "of the people" on deposit at the Treasury, or any of its subtreasuries, and issue therefor a bond bearing interest at the rate of one cent per day on the hundred dollars, or three dollars and sixty-five cents per annum; and at any time when currency may be required for the bond, it may be surrendered by the holder, and the principal and accrued interest paid by the Treasurer, or any assistant tressurer of the United States.

I remarked that until the people generally regarded it safer to loan their surplus cash to the government at 3.65 per cent. on demand, than to individual bankers, or to savings institutions at 5 or 6 per cent. on call, his plan would not meet with popular approval.

Two years ago, remarked Mr. Kelly, it was deemed entirely safe to loan money to Jay Cooke & Co., on call, at 6½ per cent. The same could be said a month ago of Duncan, Sherman & Co. It would not be difficult, he imagined, to convince those who have lost principal and interest through the suspension of these firms, that the Government is the safest banker.

It seems to me, said I, that if your plan is adopted we will, to a great extent, get rid of these individual bankers who, under pretense of paying a big interest for deposits, generally manage to get away with the whole sum deposited. From whom do you, I asked, meet with the strongest opposition to your measure?

From the National banks, the Judge replied. The people loan them money without any interest; with it the banks purchase 6 per cent. gold-bearing bonds, and depositing these bonds with the U. S. Treasurer as security, they obtain the national bank notes, which they loan to their depositors at the rate of 6 per cent.

I see, Judge, remarked your correspondent, that the New York Tribune still attempts to throw ridicule upon your financial policy.

Yes, because derision is easier than argument; but then the Tribune ridiculed those who questioned the wisdom to Jay Cooke & Co.'s Pacific railroad scheme, and did more, perhaps, than any other newspaper in the United States to induce the public to invest in it.

Would not your plan, if adopted, largely increase the interest account on the Government? I inquired.

Most assuredly not, for with the money loaned to the Government upon the 3.65 bonds the national Treasurer would be enabled to call in the 6 per cent. bonds now largely held in Europe, the gold bearing interest upon which is draining our country of all its precious metal, and not until our bonds are held by our own people, and the interest upon them paid to American citizens, can we expect to meet with a flood tide of prosperity.

At this point in our conversation the boat neared the wharf, and the Judge, on his way to Atlantic City, left the boat to take the cars.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE.

The Coming Woman.

BY A. C. GEBBLE.

Various have been the conjectures, and questions without number have been asked, and opinions very freely advanced in regard to the "coming man." But how little interest comparatively is shown, as to what the "coming woman," is to be. As if the coming man could get along without woman's aid; or sympathy. A few questions in regard to the coming woman. Will the coming woman equal the women of to-day, mentally, morally or physically? Well, it is only reasonable to suppose that, in mental capacity, she will equal if not exceed the woman of the present age. From the number of ladies, seminaries to be found in our country, one would naturally come to the conclusion that the coming woman, would at least be well educated. As to morals, one can scarcely venture an opinion. To look at one side of the question, one would be ready to think that she would exceed in morality, but on the other hand the prospect is almost gloomy.

Whether they will equal in physical strength, the present generation, time alone will determine, and will depend solely upon their manner of living, eating and dressing. Will the coming woman be what they call "strong-minded," wanting the liberty to vote, making public speeches, holding caucuses, and giving their children (unfortunate beings) over to the tender mercies of a nurse girl? Well, it is to be hoped not, for though there are many gifted and intelligent woman before the public now, yet I hold (if wrong I hope forgiveness) that home is the true, legitimate domain of woman. But when asked if the late temperance movement, (as carried forward by the noble crusaders,) is a piece of "strong-mindedness? I answer both yes and no. Yes, because who with weak head or heart would ever have ventured on such a mission. I answer no, for it was not strong-mindedness in the common acceptance of the term. They were doing a noble work. Were rescuing their husbands, fathers, brothers and sons from destruction, and trying to induce rumsellers to take a right start in life. A nobler work by far than striving to enter the political world, side by side with man as his equal. All honor to the brave and strong-minded temperance crusaders who were more than man's equal. Will the coming woman make pleasant homes? Now this is the most important after all. And the outlook, taking all into consideration, is encouraging, at any rate if woman loves and is loved, and feels that her efforts are appreciated, she will make home just as pleasant and attractive as the power for doing so, lies within her. All hail to the coming woman who, as mistress of the household, as the light of the fireside and queen of hearts is more than man's equal.

NEW YORK, Aug. 18, 1875.

Wandering, as we have been, for a few days among works of art and things of beauty, our minds were naturally led by the sight of lake and fountain to the remembrance of our own beautiful fountain among the mountains, and we did. No wonder, as the sun, pouring down upon brownstone and brick, sending the inmates thereof in quest of cool retirement, that they should select a temporary home in sight of its pure, cool depths.

This season of the year for a visit to New York is preferable to any other, offering, as it does, every facility for sight-seeing and enjoyment. Daily excursions to Long Branch and Cape May, Sea Cliff, up the Hudson, moonlight excursions on the river and bay, drive through the parks an suburbs

For places of amusement, there is first on the list Gilmore's Concert Garden, formerly Barnum's Hippodrome, a place of bewildering beauty and brilliancy. Looking upon it for the first time from the main entrance on Madison avenue, its thousands of differently colored lights, its fountains, tropical plants, cascade pouring down over its bed of rocks, dancing and sparkling in the reflected light, surrounded by evergreens and moss-covered stones, its thousands of promenaders in full dress, and above all, and through all, the soul-stirring music from Gilmore's celebrated band, make the whole a realization of a highly-colored picture of fairy land. Twice, sometimes oftener, during the evening, the announcement of a cornet solo by Levy or Arbuckle, brings, promenaders from the walks thronging about the music stand to listen spell-bound to the beautifully modulated tones brought forth by those princes of cornet players. Tables, with chairs, have been placed where were formerly rows of seats, giving opportunity for rest and refreshment, at an elevation commanding a full view of the whole brilliant scene.

Among the day excursions, Long Branch is, of course, one of the favorites. Leaving the city about 9 o'clock in the morning, two hours' sail brings us to Sandy Hook, where the train is waiting, bound for Long Branch and the races. Stopping at Long Branch, we started at first for a stroll on the beech, where a few bathers were displaying their strength in battling with the waves. As the great waves come up, breaking into surf and spray at our feet, we forget the skeletons and wrecks and ghostly sights which it washes and hides, and thinking only of the grandeur and strength of old ocean, a feeling of enthusiasm takes possession of us, amounting almost to worship; the same feeling which filled the breast of the red man, who, knowing nothing of the Creator, fell down and worshipped the power he saw manifested in the elements about him. Here the keen appetite induced by exercise and the bracing sea breezes, recalls us in search of a restaurant or hotel. After dinner we take a carriage for a drive along the noble Ocean avenue. One cottage after another was pointed out to us as belonging to men of note. West End Hotel, with its sumptuous apartments and fare, is well worth a visit, being the fashionable hotel of Long Branch. A little farther on, and to the right, we passed the famous club or gambling house of John Chamberlin, nightly crowded, especially so during the races. Still further on, and on the ocean side of the avenue, are the three handsome residences and grounds of Curtis & Sons, proprietors of Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup.

We took a personal interest in these, having contributed our mite to their erection and support. Among the handsomest residences and grounds is the literally vine-covered cottage of Childs, of the Phila. Ledger, and the large residence of Thomas Murphy, of New York. Some distance beyond Murphy's are the sea-side homes of President Grant's private Secretaries. The President's cottage is opposite Murphy's, on the ocean side, and we should have passed it by without notice, unless it had been to make some remark concerning its awkward appearance, if its owner had not been pointed out to us sitting on the veranda. It has advantage in location in being on the ocean side of the avenue, but is very much inferior in appearance to the one almost opposite which the President owns, and rents for $300—for the season. The great father, reclining at his ease, enjoying the refreshing sea-breeze, neither reading nor yet smoking, looked very much like a thousand other men we had passed—nothing imposing in his appearance and certainly not in his residence. The ride home in the evening from Sandy Hook, passing through the narrows and up New York Bay, and by the fortifications which are supposed to defend New York from the approach of a foreign enemy by sea, and varied by a short but severe storm, which for a time was so thick and black as to hide the shores and sky, and even the water through which we were passing from view, and we arrive at home, feeling that we have spent the day not only pleasantly but profitably. ——The best place in Bellefonte to buy the fruit in their season is at Sechler's. They have now on hand a large lot of very nice Peaches, Lemons, Oranges and every thing else in this line that any one can want, as they have also the finest assortment of groceries to be found in the place. Call and see them.

——F. C. Richards, the watch-maker, is doing a thriving business at his new store in McCafferty's building, opposite the depot. He has an elegant assortment of clocks, watches and jewelry, and, what is better, it is the best place in the county to purchase anything of this kind. Give him a call and you will be sure to trade.

——Unfortunately for Bellefonte, there is only one book store in the place, but on the other hand fortunately for the people, Stitzer keeps that one, and a better man for that business could not be found, in the State, but he keeps a great many other things besides books. He has lately received a large lot of Croquet sets which he is selling surprisingly cheap; also a lot of Base Ball bats and toys, stationery, blanks, wall paper &c., the finest assortment to be found outside of Philadelphia.

MARRIED

On the 5th inst., at the residence of Joseph Trexler, by Justice Thompson, Franklin Reside to Miss Ellen Decker, both of Harris township, Centre county, Pa.

DIED.

On Sunday morning, August 15, at his residence on Allegheny street, Roland Curtin, aged about 67 years.

In Memoriam.

Yesterday witnessed the funeral of the oldest native born citizen of Bellefonte. ROLAND CURTIN was born on the second day of September, 1808, in the stone house on the corner of Allegheny street and Cherry Alley, lately occupied by John D. Awl. Deceased was the third son of Roland Curtin, who emigrated to this country from Ireland in the year 1792, and who was among the earliest settlers of this county, and a gentleman of refinement and education, having received thorough scholastic training in the Office of Rome and Rome. His family consisted of six sons, Austin, James, Roland, John, Andrew, (ex-Governor Curtin) and Constance. Roland Curtin survived his two elder brothers, and the three younger survive him. Up to his eighteenth year he attended carefully to, reading the bulk of his education in a store, well-known seminary in the city of Harrisburg. At the age of eighteen he engaged actively in the iron business with his father. There was no way of shipping iron then, except by arks on the river, or in wagons. But in 1804 there was even a good wagon road across the mountains to Pittsburgh. Young Roland, as he was then called, transported many a wagon-load of iron from this county to Pittsburg. When the prices were good in the East, he took charge of the shipping by arks, on the Susquehanna, to market. The manufacture of iron was the business of his life, and for over fifty years he was actively engaged as a manager of iron works, the greater part of the time at the well-known Eagle Iron Works, at what is now called Curtin's Station.

On the 4th of June, 1834, he was united in wedlock to Ellen Irvin, daughter of General John Irvin, who, with General Potter, at an early day, was the largest land owner in the county.

In 1839, Roland Curtin & Sons, of which firm deceased was the managing partner, built Forges, Furnaces, and manufactured iron there in connection with the Eagle Works, until 1845, when the former was sold. He remained at the latter place as partner and one of the managers until the year 1850, when he removed to Bellefonte. Two years ago he sold his interest to his two sons, Austin Curtin and Andrew G. Curtin, Jr. Since that time he has lived quietly with his family and friends, enjoying the fruits and blessings of his old age. Surviving him are the widowed mother and seven sons, viz: Captain Austin Curtin, of the Eagle Iron Works; General J. Irwin Curtin, of Lock-Haven; Orlando W. Curtin, Roland D. Curtin, Andrew G. Curtin, Jr., James Constans Curtin, and William I. Curtin. Two daughters, Margery Jane and Annie Irwin, died in infancy. He had for many years been enjoying reasonably good health, until the present summer. Possessed of remarkable bodily and mental vigor, he endured the worry and toil of many years of active business life that would have broken down many another man. During the present summer, his emaciated face and feeble step indicated that his life-journey was drawing near the end. Several weeks ago, by advice of his physician, he went to the sea-shore in the hope that a change would be beneficial. He selected Ocean Grove as the place best suited to his taste, and remained there until nearly a week ago, experiencing much benefit. On his return, he caught cold, and, on reaching Lock Haven, on Thursday last, was compelled to remain there in the family of his son. He suffered intensely until Saturday morning, August 14. At about 11 o'clock he was given an opiate, when he opened his eyes, gave one last look at his weeping family gathered at his bedside, then closed his eyes forever, never after speaking. His breathing continued regularly until within twenty minutes of one o'clock on Sunday morning, when he passed away calmly and peacefully.

Roland Curtin was a remarkable man in many particulars. Plain, straightforward, and possessed of a vigorous mind, he was felt as a strong man in every circle in which he moved. In his relations with his fellow men, he was open, loyal and true, of humane and affable demeanor; always honorable with himself and in his judgments of others; no law but his word was required to fulfil his engagements. In his religious duties he was always vigilant; and no man was ever more punctual than he in his attendance on the services of the church. As regularly as Sabbath came, just as regularly was he found—when health permitted—in his seat in the Presbyterian church. It is the prerogative, of noble natures, that they retain their influence after death. The lamps which guided us on earth become stars to light us from above, and the beneficent example of this good man may still claim our aspirations. His life and character will maintain their ennobling influence long after his ashes have mouldered in the tomb. D. H. H.

ANNOUNCEMENTS.

SHERIFF.

We are authorized to announce the name of Captain H. C. Beamer, of Potter township, as a candidate for sheriff, subject to the decision of the Republican County Convention.

We are authorized to announce David M Glenn, of Bellefonte, as candidate for sheriff, subject to the decision of the Republican County Convention.

TREASURER.

We are authorized to announce the name of George A. Bayard, of Bellefonte, as candidate for County Treasurer, subject to the decision of the Republican County Convention.

PROTHONOTARY.

Believing the interests of the Republican party of Centre county to-day calls for the representation of the honest, intelligent, and energetic men of our county, and further believing the best interests of our party would be promoted by the nomination of an always true and sincere Republican, for the office of Prothonotary, we offer the name of John I. Rankin, of Bellefonte. In offering Mr. Rankin as a candidate, we do so fully trusting he appreciates the necessity of energy in an active campaign, and will do honor to himself, and further the best interests of his party. NORTH WARD.

We are authorized to announce the name of H. A. Snyder, of Liberty township, as a candidate for Prothonotary, subject to the decision of the Republican County Convention.

We are authorized to announce the name of George R. Weaver, of Bellefonte, as a candidate for Prothonotary, subject to the decision of the Republican County Convention.

REGISTER.

We are authorized to announce the name of D. M. Cowher, of Bellefonte, as a candidate for Register, subject to the decision of the Republican County Convention.

COMMISSIONER.

We are authorized to announce the name of J. W. Campbell, of Ferguson twp., as candidate for the office of County Commissioner, subject to the decision of the Republican County Convention.

We are authorized to announce the name of J. H. Crissman, of Snow Shoe, as a candidate for Commissioner, subject to the decision of the Republican County Convention.

We are authorized to announce the name of J. Mattock Keplart, of Benner township, as a candidate for Commissioner, subject to the decision of the Republican County Convention.

Walker township respectfully presents the name of one of her citizens, Capt., W. W. Rogers, to the Republican County Convention as a candidate for Commissioner, and earnestly asks a favorable consideration of her claims, as well as the claims of her candidate for her long-continued fidelity to the party, and his services in the army in the war of the Rebellion.

BOGGS TWP., Centre Co., Pa., July 17, 1875.

MR. EDITOR.—Boggs twp. would like to see a good live "Republican" in the Commissioners office and want "Andy Gregg" nominated for that office. He is sound on all things pertaining to the party. He would fill the office with ability. He will be able to control as large a vote as any other man the party can nominate. He is now and always has been a "sincere" Republican and so was his honored Father before him. Let us nominate and elect him to the office. BOGGS TWP.

MR. EDITOR:—Believing that the office of County Commissioner should be filled by our very best men, permit us, through your paper, to ask the Republican party of Centre county to put in nomination for that office our worthy and esteemed fellow citizen, William Montgomery, of Howard township. He is an old citizen, has never sought office, is a good Republican, a good business man, possesses a clear and sound judgment, and is well calculated to make a just, judicious and economical officer, and is in all respects exactly the kind of man that the citizens of Centre county would delight to vote for. HOWARD.

The time is approaching for our county convention to make up our ticket, and to select good men. The office of County Commissioner is a very important office to all of us. We should get a good, honest, reliable business man—one that would see to our own interests. We think it best for the people to hunt the man, not the man the office. Permit us to bring forward the name of Capt. Jas. Dunlap, of Furgerson township. Capt. Dunlap was elected commissioner of the county when the Democratic majority was eleven hundred. He was elected by 66 majority. Placing Capt. Dunlap's name on the ticket for Commissioner will give great strength to the Republican ticket.

MANY REPUBLICANS,
of Bald Eagle Valley.

EDITOR'S TABLE.

HARPER'S MAGAZINE FOR SEPTEMBER, 1875.—Harper's Magazine for September, containing seventy-five excellent engravings, has a happy blending of the light and picturesque with its graver and more important articles. Foremost among the latter will be ranked Professor Sumner's comprehensive review of the financial development of this country, being the eleventh paper of the "First Century" series. No topic could be more timely, when it is considered that "the momentary history of the United States," as Professor Sumner says, "from the first colonization until now, is a history of experiments with cheap substitutes for money."

The number opens with a beautifully illustrated article on "Gloucester and Cape Ann," by S. G. W. Benjamin, the author of recent illustrated papers on Brittany and the Channel Islands.

Porte Crayon reappears as a contributor, with an entertaining sketch of a Virginia tournament, characteristically illustrated.

Another illustrated paper, by Edward Howland, gives a graphic description of the tournament of medieval times.

Mr. Conway, in an interesting illustrated article on the South Kensington Museum, gives a very complete resume of the art treasures in Great Brittain; recounts the history of the Museum at South Kensington, and treats of its architecture and decoration as well as of its art collections. Among the illustrations of the article are pictures of specimens of the celebrated Henry Deux ware. In another paper Mr. Conway proposes to consider the museum with reference to its educational or art-training method and character.

James Parton contributes an illustrated paper on "Recent English Caricature," and Professor Rau concludes his series of illustrated papers on the "Stone Age in Europe."

"The Song of Deborah and Barak," according to Dr. Conant's version and arrangement, with Dore's striking illustration, will prove interesting as a reproduction in more poetic form, not simply of the most remarkable of Hebrew lyrics, but of the grandest triumphal ode in any literature. Poems are contributed by T. B. Aldrich, John W. Chadwick, Fannie R. Robinson, James Maurice Thompson, and Marcia Smith.

The number contains three short stories. In "Garth," Julian Hawthorne presents a serial novel of absorbing interest—unequalled by the productions of any living American novelist.

John Bigelow concludes his entertaining series of Haytian Proverbs, and Miss Anna C. Brackett contributes a suggestive paper in answer to the question, "Can we speak English?"

To this excellent variety of contents are added the five Editorial departments, covering topics of current interest in their respective fields.

NOTICE.—All persons are hereby cautioned against purchasing, carrying away or meddling in any manner, with all the late personal property of Isaac Miller, including grain in barn and in the ground, and one acre of potatoes, purchased by me at a sheriff's sale, held on the 16th day of August, 1875, the same being in the custody of said Miller, until I shall see fit to remove them.

Bellefonte Markets.

BELLEFONTE, August 18, 1875.

Business throughout our town moves quietly. Merchants have no inclination for augmenting their book accounts, and confine their transactions to cash and short time sales.

WHEAT—Our wheat market is very dull or inactive, and transactions are confined to old, except in a small way. So far as new is concerned, the buyers are disposed to hold off. The Eastern market has been very firm during the last fortnight, but shows some signs of weakening at present. The new Western wheat that is now coming forward for export, is soft, and buyers are reluctant to take hold of that grade.

CORN—Corn is being firmly held in first hands, but the supply at the mills is equal to the demand. The new crop promises well, and a very large yield is now anticipated.

RYE—No transactions reported.

OATS—The old crop of oats is exhausted, and the recent heavy rains seriously interfere with the harvesting of the new. It is admitted that the new crop is a good one. If the weather will admit of its being properly housed, the supply will be in abundance the coming year.

CHEROKEE REMEDY.

THE GREAT INDIAN DIURETIC.

INFINITELY SUPERIOR TO BUCHU.

Nine tenths of the human family suffer, directly or indirectly, at one time or other, from diseases or irregularities of the generative system, while the victims of indiscretion, and of quack treatment, are comparatively numerous.

The idea that patients cannot treat themselves successfully in these cases, has long ago been exploded. A good and reliable medicine, prepared by an experienced physician, from the original Indian Recipe, that is guaranteed to effect a can be as safely relied upon as the prescription of the most skillful practitioner. Such a medicine is the celebrated

CHEROKEE REMEDY.

Full directions accompany each bottle, and if they are carefully followed, a quick and permanent cure is guarranteed. Price $2.00 per bottle.

THE CHEROKEE INJECTION, should always be used in conjunction with the Remedy for both incipient and obstinate cases of Gonorrhœa. Price $2.00 per bottle.

CHEROKEE CURE

for seminal weakness (spermatorrhœa), is a simple vegetable medicine that was used for many years in the practice of the physician who first gave the remedy to the public. It has effected cures that would scarcely be credited except on ocular evidence of the fact. Full directions, with pamphlet containing all particulars of symptoms, treatment, &c., accompany each bottle. Price $2.00 per bottle. Sold everywhere.

CHEROKEE PILLS.

These Pill are prepared expressly for the cure of those irregularities to which ladies are subject, and will be found safe, reliable and effectual, for the cure of Suppression, Green Sickness, Pain in the Back, Hysteria, Sick Headache, &c., &c. Price $1.00 per box.

Heimstreet's Hair Restorative,

OR INIMITABLE HAIR COLORING.

NOT A DYE.—Heimstreet's "Hair Coloring is not a Dye, and its operation is not by any chemical effect, but by a natural restoration of the glands, thus giving the hair the color it originally had.

NATURALNESS.—When the hair is dyed, its color is leaden hued and unnatural, but when restored by HEIMSTREET'S HAIR COLORING, its appearance is so perfectly natural that no one can detect the use of any Restorative.

STAINLESS.—While the Restorative acts promptly on the hair, it leaves no stain or mark whatever on the skin. It is composed of ingredients that form a perfect dressing as well as a coloring, so that no oils, &c., are necessary.

THIS MOST EFFECTIVE of all the Hair Restorers is for sale by all druggists at 50 cents and $1.00 per bottle. Numerous certificates from those who have used it are in the possession of the proprietors.

EGYPTIAN

Rat and Vermin Destroyer

FOR EXTERMINATING RATS, MICE, WATER BUGS, ROUCHES, RED ANTS, &c.

STRENGTH.—When a Rat tastes the Egyptian Destroyer, his death warrant is signed, sure. It cannot fail to kill. It also creates great thirst, and the rat will search for water out of doors, and not die in his hole, to cause a stench that cannot be got out.

ATTRACTIVENESS.—Rats are the shrewdest of vermin. It is hard to get them to eat poison. An ingredient in the Egyption Destroyer is a perfect bait, and they are attracted rather than freightened be it. "Rats (not children) cry for it.

KEEPING SOFT.—People know how the ordinary Rat Pastes dry up and become useless, causing annoyance and loss. The Egyptian Destroyer is fully warranted to keep soft, fresh and effective in any climate for years.

SURE DEATH.—The Egyptian Destroyer kills every time. Hundreds of unsolicited testimonials are now in the hands of the proprietors, substantiating its great merits as the best preparation for destroying Vermin in the world. Be sure and ask for the "Egyptian," and take no other.

Agricultural.

Carrots for Horses.

Towards the spring, when horses have been many months highly fed on corn, carrots are extremely serviceable, indeed necessary. They keep the body properly cool and open, by which they conduce greatly to health and condition, and consequently, to cleanliness of wind. About the same thing may be said of their claims to produce a fine coat; but whatever conduces to health does so, and consequently carrots do. Carrots should be given in to the left at the ends instead of going around as in ordinary plowing. Distance should be thirty inches. Drill your seed at the rate of two pounds per acre, with bone-dust or superphosphate, which can be obtained at any agricultural-implement store. It will pay; very little more will raise a big crop, and that is what we want. The bone-dust helps them out of the way of the fly. It pays to sow plenty of seed, as the plants grow vigorously. If the fly does not get half you have plenty left, and it is better to chop them out with the hoe than want plants that do pay. The distance of ridges should be thirty inches, and twelve inches from plant to plant. As soon as the plants are up two inches high go through with the cultivator, or earlier, if necessary, and hoe each side of the plant. The next time chop them out, leaving them twelve inches apart. Keep the hoe and cultivator going as often as the weeds appear; it will pay to keep them down. The best way is always to take pretty long slices. They are sometimse given cut crossways; this is really dangerous, as horses are extremely fond of them, and if at all greedy, would be pretty apt to bolt pieces of them whole, which would be likely to cause some of them to stick in the throat. When first given they are slightly diuretic and laxative, but as the horse becomes accustomed to them, these effects are not produced. To sick and idle horses they render corn unnecessary. They are beneficial in all chronic diseases of the respiratory organs. In combination with oats, they restore worn-out horses much sooner than oats alone. They should be fed raw, in which state the horse prefers them. Some persons give carrots with the grain, thinking they tempt the horses to eat their oats, if of delicate appetite; so they might if perfectly minced, otherwise they will pick them out, and the man may eat the oats if he pleases; for depend upon it, the horse would not; but if we were to make minced feed of them, we would still consider it a very bad plan to give them with oats, for should the horse get accustomed to such a mixture, he would afterwards refuse his oats without it. For this reason carrots should be given as seperate food; and, if bought at a proper season of the year, by the ton, in the country, they are by no means an expensive one—though they become extremely so in the city when a hostler can persuade his employer that they are necessary for his horses, buys them by the bunch, consumes two of those himself, and if he is delicate as to conscience, gives the third to his horse; if not, they, of course, all go the same way. Carrots, if kept in a dry place, in sand, will keep a long time, or they will keep out of doors if covered with straw and then banked up with earth.—Exchange.

Culture of Ruta-Bagas.

A correspondent of the "Michigan Farmer" gives us the following directions for the culture of ruta-bagas:

About the first week in June, if good rotten manure is plenty, spread from ten to twenty loads per acre and plow it under; if the supply of manure is small, ridge the land first, and put the manure between the ridges, that it may be all under the plants.

The time to sow the seeds will vary according to the location; in some parts farmers like to plant as early as the 15th June, but I think the 25th is early enough, as my experience teaches me that a few days matter little if we gain a shower as soon as our seeds are planted. Let us suppose the land is manured ready, and there is an appearance of rain, put the plow to work, split the ridges, if the manure is between; if broadcast, ridge up, which is done by keeping the high horse in the furrows, and the off horse's head well off, so that every end makes a ridge that lies ready and flat to receive the seed, turning the team, weed before the plants grow large. There are numerous kinds of the ruta-baga. I have had good luck with Skirving's Improved; it is a large turnip, good for feeding, but not for shipping. Laing's is a good round turnip, not quite so large. The Imperial Swede is a new one, and bears a good character in some sections, but has not been much tried here yet. To raise a good crop, say 1,000 bushels to the acre, plow four times, cultivate four times, hoe three times, and single out one plant to every foot. This looks like a deal of work, but it will pay.

Does Cooked Food Injure Stock.

The world will never quite get rid of its old fogies—those who want to be natural, but have never studied nature. When fodder shall be cooked so as to be softer and more succulent than grass, which nature has furnished for the animal, then it will do to inquire whether nature is not violated in cookiug food for cattle. Nature furnishes grass, not dried fodder. The dried fodder is man's work of preserving food while the grass does not grow, and if he cooks this soft and succulent in imitation of grass, does he run a tilt at nature, or is he imitating her? A farmer always looks forward to the new groth of grass in the spring as affording an opportunity for his cattle to improve in condition and health, and when he cooks thoroughly his winter food, his cattle are simply kept upon grass the year round. We have kept the rame cows upon cooked food for fifteen winters and found them vigorous at nineteen and twenty years old.

Paragraphs for the Farmer.

It is estimated that in Michigan nine-tenths of the wool crop has been marketed. The prices have ranged from 38 to 42 cents, and anything above the latter has been for an exceptional quality of wool.

A Minnesota paper made a young poetess say: "Oh, for a heart full of sweet yearlings!" The poetess wrote to the editor, declaring that she wrote yearnings! and that the printer who set it up yearlings was a calf.

The Jackson (Mich.) Patriot says that the oldest horse in the world is owned by Col. Cronk, of that city. Romp is the name of this veteran, and he is fifty-one years old. His sire was Dragon, who was noted as a winner at all distances.

Prof. Riley, the state entomologist of Missouri, who is now in London, informs the "Garden" that it is a mistake to suppose that the potato beetle is not to be feared in European countries because of the climate. From what he knows of the insect, he considers the climate of Britain even better suited for it than that of Eastern America.

The Sultan of Turkey employs in his palace 6,000 servants of both sexes. He pays and feeds 300 cooks, 300 gardeners, 500 coachmen, and 600 persons to do odds and ends about the house. To feed these people and their hangers on, 1,200 sheep and 2,000 fowls are killed every day, and 60,000 francs are expended for lights. No wonder they call him the sick man of Europe.

The price of horseflesh is at a fearful discount in Bedford county, Pa., if we are to judge from the following list of prices at which five horses were recently disposed of at public sale in one of the townships in that county: One brown horse, ten cents; one bay horse, fifteen cents; one brown horse, $2.25; one dapple gray, $7.50; one black horse, $12.25; total for five horses, $22.25.

A New England Farmer correspondent tells the boys that the way to get a woodchuck out of a stone wall without tearing it down is to take a piece of wire about three feet long, place both ends in one hand, and place the curve at the creature's nose. He will usually lay hold, and being unable to let go when there is a steady pull, he is speedily brought to daylight and to destruction.

M. Paraf is said to be the discoverer of a way of doing without rain, if necessary. He knew that the air is full of moisture, and he knew that chloride of calcium would attract and condense it, for cultural purposes. He has applied this chloride on sand hills and roadbeds, on grass, on all sorts of soils, successfully, and has ascertained that it may be applied in such proportions as will produce the irrigation of land more cheaply and efficiently than by means of canals or other methods of securing artificial irrigation. One of M. Paraf's applications will produce and retain abundant moisture for three days, when the same amount of water introduced by the present method will evaporate in an hour.

The rabbit forms an important article of food in Great Britain and Ireland. In addition to the very large number imported from the continent, it is estimated there are annually sold for food 27,000,000 rabbits. The flesh is sold at an average rate of twelve cents, gold, per pound, which is fully a third less than the price of beef and considerably under that of the choicer portion of the sheep. The value of the annual supply is estimated to be $7,875,000.

A Colorado saloon-keeper said of a rough crowd: "I couldn't get their whiskey strong enough for them, so, after trying every way, I at last made a mixture of oak poison and butternut. That fetched them. I called it the 'sheep-herder's delight' and it was a popular drink. The first pike I tried it on yelled with delight; the next one turned a double somerset in front of the house. A pedler came along, and, after taking several drinks of my 'sheep-herder's delight,' he went off, and stole his own pack and hid in the woods.

Recently at Northport, Long Island, 150 men assembled to see a hog killed and weighed, and 150 guesses were made at fifty cents each, it being announced that the one guessing the nearest should have the hog, for which $75 had been paid. In view of the great excitement, and claims made by some that this was the largest hog in the country, Western hog growers will be surprized to learn that the dressed weight was but 666 pounds. It was a little singular that five persons, one representing a large club, guessed the exact weight, although most thought the weight would be over 700 pounds.

It is estimated that Western New York probably produces one-half of all the apples raised in the United States. The annual product of several counties amounts to half a million barrels. The town of Lyons, Wayne county, last fall sent 40,000 barrels to market, made into cider over 20,000 bushels, and dried 2,000. This amount, with those retained for home use, made the crop for that place last year 50,000 barrels. Apples were cheap last year, but when the amount of labor bestowed upon the crop is taken into account, they were fully as profitable as wheat. The principle market varieties of Western New York, are the Baldwin, Greening, and Roxbury Russet.

Miscellaneous.

Honesty is the Best Policy.

The truth of the good old maxim, that "honesty is the best policy," is upheld by the daily experience of life, uprightness and integrity being found as successful in business as in everything else.

As Hugh Miller's worthy uncle used to advise him: "In all your dealings give your neighbor the cast of the bank—good measure heaped up, and running over, and you will not lose by it in the end."

Integrity of word and deed ought to be the very corner-stone of all business transactions. To the tradesman, the merchant, and manufacturer, it should be what honor is to the soldier, and charity to the Christian. In the humblest calling there will always be found scope for the exercise of this uprightness of character. Hugh Miller, speaks of the mason with whom he served his apprenticeship as one who "put his conscience into every stone that he laid." So the true mechanic will pride himself upon the thoroghness and solidity of his work, and the high-minded contractor upon the honesty of the performance of his contract in every particular. The upright manufacturer will find not only honor and reputation, but substantial success, in the genuineness of the article which he produces, and the merchant in the honesty of what he sells, and that it really is what it seems to be.

Baron Dupin, speaking of the general probity of Englishmen, which he held to be a principal cause of their success, observed: "We way succeed for a time by fraud, by surprise, by violence, but we can succeed permanently only by means directly opposite. It is not alone the courage, the intelligence, the activity of the merchant and manufacturer which maintain the superiority of their productions and the character of their country; it is far more their wisdom, their economy, and above all, then probity. If ever in the British Island the useful citizen should lose these virtues, we may be sure that for England, as for every other country, the vessels of a degenerate commerce, repulsed from every shore, would speedily disappear from those seas whose surface they now cover with the treasures of the universe, bartered for the treasures of the industry of three kingdoms." It must be admitted that trade tries character perhaps more severely than any other pursuit in life. It puts to the severest tests honesty, self denial, justice, and truthfulness; and men of business who pass through such trials unstained are perhaps worthy of as great honor as soldiers who prove their courage around the fire and perils of battle. And to the credit of the multitudes of men engaged in the various departments of trade, we think it must be admitted that, on the whole, they pass through their trials nobly. If we reflect but for a moment of wealth daily intrusted even to subordinate persons, who themselves probably earn but a base competency, the loose cash which is constantly passing through the hands of shopmen, agents, brokers, and clerks in banking-houses, and note how comparatively few are the breeches of trust which occur amid all this temptation, it will probably be admitted that this steady daily honesty of conduct is most honorable to human nature, if it do not even tempt us to be proud of it. The same trust and confidence reposed by men of business in each other, as implied by the system of credit, which is mainly based upon the principle of honor, would be surprising if it were not so much a matter of ordinary practice in business transactions. Dr. Chalmers has well said, that the implicit trust with which merchants are accustomed to confide in distant agents, separated from them for perhaps by half a globe—often consigning vast wealth to persons, recommended only by their character, whom perhaps they never saw, is probably the finest act of homage which men can render to one another. It is possible that the scrupulously honest man may not grow rich so fast as the unscrupulously and dishonest one; but the success will be of a truer kind, earned without fraud or injustice. And even though a man should for a time be unsuccessful, still he must be honest: better lose all and save character, for character is itself a fortune; and if the high principled man will but hold on his way courageously, success will surely come—nor will the highest reward of all be withheld from him. Wordsworth well describes the "Happy Warrior" as he

"Who comprehends his trust, and to the same
Keeps faithful with a singleness of aim;
And therefore does not stoop nor lie in wait
For wealth, or honor, or for worldly state;
Whom they must follow, on whose head must fall,
Like showers of manna if they come at all."

WHAT I KNOW ABOUT VEGETINE.

SOUTH BOSTON, May 9, 1870.

H. R. STEVENS, Esq.:

Dear Sir—I have had considerable experience with the Vegetine. For dyspepsia, general debility, and impure blood, the Vegetine is superior to anything which I have ever used. I commenced taking Vegetine about the middle of last winter, and, after using a few bottles, it entirely cured me of dyspepsia, and my blood never was in so good condition as at the present time. It will afford me pleasure to give any further particulars relative to what I know about this good medicine to any one who will call or address me at my residence, 186 Athens street. Very respectfully,

MONROE PARKER,
186 Athens street.

DYSPEPSIA.

SYMPTOMS—Want of appetite, rising of food and wind from the stomach, acidity of the stomach, heartburn, dryness and whiteness of the tongue in the morning, sense of distension in the stomach and bowels, sometimes rumbling and pain; costiveness, which is occasionally interrupted by diarrhœa; paleness of the urine. The mouth is clammy, or has a sour or bitter taste. Other frequent symptoms are waterbrash, palpitation of the heart, headache, and disorders of the senses, as seeing double, etc. There is general debility, languor and aversion to motion; dejection of the spirits, disturbed sleep, and frightful dreams.

GAINED FIFTEEN POUNDS OF FLESH

SOUTH BERWICK, Me., Jan. 17, 1872.

H. R. STEVENS, Esq.:

Dear Sir—I have had dyspepsia in its worst form for the last ten years, and have taken hundreds of dollars' worth of medicine without obtaining any relief. In September last I commenced taking the Vegetine, since which time my health has steadily improved. My food digests well, and I have gained fifteen pounds of flesh. There are several others in this place taking the Vegetine, and all have obtained relief. Yours Truly,

THOMAS E. MOORE,
Overseer of card room, Portsmouth Co.'s Mills.

ALL DISEASES OF THE BLOOD.

If Vegetine will relieve pain, cleanse, purify, and cure diseases, restoring the patient to perfect health after trying different physicians, many remedies, suffering for years, is it not conclusive proof, if you are a sufferer, you can be cured? Why is this medicine performing such great cures? It works in the blood, in the circulating fluid. It can truly be called the Great Blood Purifier. The great source of disease originates in the blood; and no medicine that does not act directly upon it, to purify and renovate, has any just claim upon public attention.

GOOD EVIDENCE.

CINCINNATI, Nov. 26, 1872.

MR. H. R. STEVENS:

Dear Sir—The two bottles of Vegetine furnished me by your agent, my wife has used with great benefit. For a long time she has been troubled with dizziness and costiveness; these troubles are now entirely removed by the use of Vegetine.

She was also troubled with dyspepsia and general debility, and has been greatly benefitted.

THOMAS GILMORE,
229½ Walnut Street.

RELIABLE EVIDENCE.

MR. H. R. STEVENS:

Dear Sir—I will most cheerfully add my testimony to the great number you have already received in favor of your great and good medicine, Vegetine, for I do not think enough can be said in its praise, for I was troubled over thirty years with that dreadful disease, catarrh, and had such bad coughing spells that it would seem as though I could never breathe any more, and Vegetine has cured me; and I do feel to thank God all the time that there is so good a medicine as Vegetine, and I also think it one of the best medicines for coughs and weak sinking feelings at the stomach, and advise everybody to take the Vegetine, for I can assure them that it is one of the best medicines that ever was.

MRS. L. GORE,
Corner Magazine and Walnut Sts., Cambridge, Mass.

APPRECIATION.

CHARLESTOWN, Mass., March 19, 1869.

H. R. STEVENS:

This is to certify that I have used your "Blood Purifyer" (Vegetine) in my family for several years, and think that, for scrofula or cankerous humors or rheumatic affections, it cannot be excelled; and as a blood purifier and spring medicine it is the best thing I ever used; and I have used almost everything. I can cheerfully recommend it to any one in need of such a medicine. Yours Respectfully,

MRS. A. A. DINSMORE,
19 Russell Street.

TASTELESS MEDICINES.

A prominent New York physician lately complained to DUNDAS DICK & CO. about their Sandalwood Oil Capsules, stating that sometimes they cured miraculously, but that a patient of his had taken them without effect. On being informed that several imitations were sold, he inquired and found his patient had not been taking DUNDAS DICK & CO'S.

What happened to this physician may have happened to others, and DUNDAS DICK & CO. take this method of protecting physicians, druggists and themselves, and preventing Oil of Sandalwood from coming into disrepute.

PHYSICIANS who once prescribe the Capsules will continue to do so, for they contain the Pure Oil in the best and cheapest form.

DUNDAS DICK & CO. use more Oil of Sandalwood than all the Wholesale and Retail Druggists and Perfumers in the United States combined, and this is the sole reason why the pure oil is sold Cheaper in their Capsules than in any other form.

OIL OF SANDALWOOD is fast superseding every other remedy, sixty Capsules only being required to insure a safe and certain cure in six or eight days. From no other medicine can this result be had.

DUNDAS DICK & CO.'S SOFT CAPSULES solve the problem, long considered by eminent physicians, of how to avoid the nausea and disgust experienced in swallowing, which are well known to detract from, if not destroy, the good effects of many valuable remedies.

Soft Capsules are put up in tin-foil and neat boxes, thirty in each, and are the only Capsules prescribed by physicians.

Tasteless Medicines.—Castor Oil and many other nauseous medicines can be taken easily and safely in Dundas Dick & Co's Soft Capsules. No taste. No smell.

☞ These were the only Capsules admitted to the last Paris Exposition.

Send for circular to 35 Wooster Street, N. Y.

☞ Sold at all Drug Stores Here.

MEDICAL.

Wright's Rejuvenating Elixer.

For the restoration of Nature's forces. It gives new life and vigor to the aged, and causes the blood of youth to course through the veins. It effectually cures Impotency, Palpitation of the Heart, Loss of Muscular Power, Low Spirits, Disorganization of the Generative Organs, and all the train of ills that follow in the path of the transgressor of Nature's laws. Price $2 per bottle.

It will be readily understood that in the brief space afforded by the advertising columns of a public print, it is impossible to give all particulars of the diseases that may be cured by the CHEROKEE MEDICINES. That they are destined to become immensely popular is plainly obvious in consequence of their

GREAT INTRINSIC MERIT.

The pamphlet and circulars that accompany the medicines give all the information which cannot be given here, and the remedies may be had of any respectable druggist.

"Unquestionably the Best and Cheapest Fashion Journal ever published in America."

THE

"DOMESTIC" MONTHLY

A JOURNAL OF

Fashion, Literature, and Art.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

"How a Journal of Fashion can combine fashion and literature at very low terms is well shown by this periodical. The May number, besides a colored Fashion Plate, has thirty-six pages, profusely illustrated, on the fashions of costumes for ladies and children, seasonable fabrics, trimmings, millinery, lingerie, coiffures, and domestic art, and yet with all this there is room for poems and tales, by popular authors, notices of new books, etc., and the price of all this matter is only $1.50 per annum. Take it all in all, we know of no periodical of which readers get so much for their money as those of the 'DOMESTIC' MONTHLY."—N. Y. Evening Mail.

"If one wishes the latest information concerning the latest fashions, the 'DOMESTIC' MONTHLY is ready with the intelligence, aided by abundant illustrations. It does not, however, neglect current literature, as it contains poems, a serial story, some interesting miscellany, and art notes."—N. Y. World.

"It combines literary merit with a great deal of information in regard to ladies' costumes, fabrics, toilettes, etc. It is plentifully illustrated in its fashion articles, and its list of contributors is deserving of much praise."—N. Y. Commercial Advertiser.

"A far better periodical than many of the so-called weekly papers."—Terrebonne Republican, Houma, La.

"One of the best Fashion Magazines that comes to our office."—Clarendon Press, Manning, S. C.

"The most delightful of the Fashion Magazines."—American Standard, Jersey City, N. J.

"We can heartily recommend it."—Fort Madison (Iowa) Democrat.

Ayer's Cathartic Pills,

For the relief and cure of all derangements in the stomach, liver, and bowels. They are a mild aperient, and an excellent purgative. Being purely vegetable, they contain no mercury or mineral whatever. Much serious sickness and suffering is prevented by their timely use; and every family should have them on hand for their protection and relief, when required. Long experience has proved them to be the safest, surest, and best of all the Pills with which the market abounds. By their occasional use, the blood is purified, the corruptions of the system expelled, obstructions removed, and the whole machinery of life restored to its healthy activity. Internal organs which become clogged and sluggish are cleansed by Ayer's Pills, and stimulated into action. Thus incipient disease is changed into health, the value of which change, when reckoned on the vast multitudes who enjoy it, can hardly be computed. Their sugar-coating makes them pleasant to take, and preserves their virtues unimpaired for any length of time, so that they are ever fresh, and perfectly reliable. Although searching, they are mild, and operate without disturbance to the constitution or diet or occupation.

Full directions are given on the wrapper to each box, how to use them as a Family Physic, and for the following complaints, which these Pills rapidly cure:—

For Dyspepsia or Indigestion, Listlessness, Languor, and Loss of Appetite, they should be taken moderately to stimulate the stomach, and restore its healthy tone and action.

For Liver Complaint and its various symptoms, Bilious Headache, Sick Headache, Jaundice or Green Sickness, Bilious Colic and Bilious Fevers, they should be judiciously taken for each case, to correct the diseased action, or remove the obstructions which cause it.

For Dysentery or Diarrhœa, but one mild dose is generally required.

For Rheumatism, Gout, Gravel, Palpitation of the Heart, Pain in the Side, Back, and Loins, they should be continuously taken, as required, to change the diseased action of the system. With such change those complaints disappear.

For Dropsy and Dropsical Swellings, they should be taken in large and frequent doses to produce the effect of a drastic purge.

For Suppression, a large dose should be taken, as it produces the desired effect by sympathy.

As a Dinner Pill, take one or two Pills to promote digestion, and relieve the stomach.

An occasional dose stimulates the stomach and bowels, restores the appetite, and invigorates the system. Hence it is often advantageous when no serious derangement exists. One who feels tolerably well, often finds that a dose of these Pills makes him feel decidedly better, from their cleansing and renovating effect on the digestive apparatus.

Bellefonte and County.

——Court commences next Monday and will last but one week.

——Our public schools, we understand, will open on the first Monday in September next.

——The reason that some people have weak eyes is because they are in a weak place.

——The August days are coming back again; the air bites hotly; it is very warm.

——The Chief Burgess has petitioned the town council for a lock-up. This looks ominous.

—— We have a very interesting story, called the "Red Pepper Story," which we are holding over for a future issue.

——We believe there were no representatives from Centre county at the meeting of the State Teachers' Association at Wilkesbarre last week.

——The Patrons of Husbandry will hold a basket pic-nic in the grove near Hublersburg, on Saturday, 21st inst. All Patrons and others are cordially invited to be present.

——We have information that all the granges of the Patrons of Husbandry in this county will hold a Harvest-Home picnic on the fair ground, sometime in September.

——That animated skeleton organization, known as the Bellefonte Fish Company, should revive itself sufficiently now to enforce the law against fishing for trout.

——We had the pleasure of a call yesterday from Miss Mecca, a patent button vender. No pilgrim was worshiping at her shrine, and it is not probable that she will soon Mecca change in her name.

——Old Fort Lodge No. 537, A. Y. M., will be constituted and the officers install, on Thursday, August 19th inst. The Grand Lodge of Pennsylvania and a number of visiting lodges are expected to be present.

——The Farmers' Mutual Life Insurance Company, of Centre county, offer a reward of $500 for the arrest and conviction of the party who set fire to the stable of C. F. Herlacher, in Centre Hall, on the night of the 23d of July last.

——Count Von Turckheim, who has been quite ill for some time past, is, we are pleased to say, rapidly recovering. Our beautiful latitude, our beautiful scenery, our cool nights, pure atmosphere, great variety of mineral waters entire absence of mosquitos, will do more to impoverish a grave yard than a nation of Elijas.

——Of course it's none of our funeral and we don't know much about the circumstances, but it strikes us, just as we are going to press and in good condition to be struck, that it was rather unkind in the Watchman to abuse Adam Hoy, Esq., in its last issue after it had beaten him so profusely in the Senatorial contest. But then we reckon Mr. Hoy can take care of himself.

——The Democracy have nominated Doctor Joseph Adams, of Milesburg, for Coroner. We are very much delighted at this step, because if there's any one thing more than the terror of the unknown hereafter that might deter, dissuade, and stay the would-be suicide, it would be the awful thought that Doctor Joseph Adams, of Milesburg, would sit upon his clammy remains.

——On Wednesday night, 4th, while Thomas Richardson and wife, of Spring Mills, with their little grand-son, Jacob McCool, were going along the pike, when at the hill east of James Forster's farm, their horse suddenly took fright and ran off, throwing them out and causing some severe cuts and bruises on the heads and faces of Mr. and Mrs. Richardson, while the little boy escaped unhurt.

——Montgomery's Price List.—For fall and winter of 1875-6, suits made to order, as follows:

Sacque Suits, from	$25 to $45
Double-breasted Cutaway's, from	28 to 48
Prince Albert's, from	30 to 50
Fine Beaver Overcoats, from	35 to 50
Melton Overcoats, from	25 to 40
Kersey's Overcoats, from	20 to 35
Pantaloons, from	7 to 12

These prices are much lower than at any season since the war. A perfect fit guaranteed. Goods sold by the yard.

——Something must be done to better protect the peace in Bellefonte after dark. We dislike to be finding fault with our borough officials, but we believe every good citizen of the town will stand by us when we chide the police for not quelling the midnight disturbances, which destroy the peace and good order. Almost every night, gangs of boys and young men perambulate the streets, singing obscene songs, swearing, yelling, fighting, and in other ways alarming the neighborhood. We call upon the peace-loving community to bear testimony to this fact. On Saturday night, a drunken crowd kept a continuous uproar on the streets until after three o'clock on Sunday morning. An hour before that time, they congregated in the neighborhood of the depot and alarmed everybody about the Bush House and in that neighborhood. Col. Wilkinson requested them to leave and not disturb the guests of the hotel, but they refused to do so. This is only a single instance; almost every night witnesses the same disturbances. We ask the police force if they are doing their duty in allowing this conduct. Are they not paid for preserving good order? Why is it that they accept pay for failing to do their duty? They cannot deny that disorder prevails, unless they sleep more soundly than the rest of the population. Are they afraid to do their duty? Then resign. But the blame does not rest solely on the police; let the authorities who placed them in office share the responsibilty. Why is tax money thrown away? Is it because our people are so wealthy? and do they delight in midnight brawls and burglaries? Let the police do their duty and we will find no word of fault.

——Mrs. Ferguson lived just across the street from her pastor. The church where he preached and she worshipped was several squares away. This estimable lady was accustomed every Sabbath morning to ride in the carriage along with the pastor (a middle-aged, good-natured gentleman, and a great favorite) to church and back, as the distance was too far for her to walk. On Sunday last the pastor's carriage drew up to Mrs. Ferguson's door. She was waiting, and, bustling down, prepared to get in, declining the pastor's proffered aid. Suddenly she noticed that he was alone. "Where is your wife?" she asked abruptly. "She is not well enough to go to church to-day," was the reply. "Where is your daughter," was the next query, and the answer was: "She stayed at home to take care of her mother." An instant of hesitation followed; then the lady turned her head upon the pastor, saying: "I guess I won't go to church with you; there's so much scandal about nowadays." She is ninety-one years of age; but such is the alarmingly baleful influence of the Beecher trial.

——A wild-eyed specimen of ferocity was in our office, on Wednesday last, just after the REPUBLICAN had been distributed, to sponge a paper and volunteer the information that the streets of Bellefonte would flow with blood, if a certain paper didn't stop "musicking about him." We merely state the fact to request old Ferocity to reserve his reservoir of gore until Tuesday of each week, with a like request to other bloodthirsty members of society, so that we can have the news fresh for Wednesday, which is our publication day. This thing of killing people and ducking them in the race along about Sunday, gets very stale before the middle of the week.

——The supervisors of Boggs township have erected a substantial railing along the road skirting the Forge dam, from the toll-gate to Linn & McCoy's Iron Works. This is an effectual bar to accidents by horses and vehicles falling over that steep embankment into deep water. This example is worthy of imitation; our borough authorities should erect a similar railing along the board walk on Water street, from Allegheny street to the spring.

——The tendency of the age is to larger and better varieties of vegetables and fruit. Hardly a season passes but some new kind of potato is brought forward—larger and smoother than its predecessor. This is well enough as far as the sight and palate are concerned, but if the size of the vegetable is much more increased, rheumatic persons will have to build larger pockets or fight their aches with other weapons.

——Out in the oil regions the other day, a well-dressed man bought ten cents' worth of fine-cut tobacco, and in paying for it, pulled out a roll of $100 bills. A man who saw him, followed him home and murdered him for his money. That's just what we always said would happen when folks asked why we didn't haul out $100 bills. To avoid murder, we have always told the tobacco man to put it down on the slate.

——There are likely to be some serious complications arising from the fact that there is only one private in our new military company. In case he becomes mutinous, as he threatens, or deserts, how is he to be punished? When a private is ordered to death, he must, according to military rule, be shot by privates. Will they compel him to suicide?

The Result.—For some time past we have taken occasion in these columns to attempt a little fun at the expense of some of the Democratic candidates in this county. If any of the defeated aspirants feel themselves injured by us, we are sorry and take it all back. Those who were fortunate enough to make the nominations will probably hear more from us. An analysis of Tuesday's Convention shows some important results. On the face, it would appear that the opposition wings—the "Modocs" and the "Regulars"—had grounded arms and come together as one family. The bitter spirit, which had been gnawing for years at the vitals of both, and which developed into the open hand-in-hand contest last fall, seems now to be entirely dead. The hatchet was ostensibly burried on Tuesday; the calumet was smoked and the united chiefs danced upon the coffin lids of the departed bugaboo. Hon. C. T. Alexander, their leader, in last fall's congressional contest was baptized with anew, and honored the chairmanship of the Convention. This honor may reasonably be looked upon as being in a manner empty and productive of no substantial good to him, more than that he and his backers proved themselves an over-match for the regulars.

Mr Meek has reaped the only substantial benefit that could be taken from the field. He deserves credit for the manner of his doing it. The Senatorial nomination he carried off by acclamation, and that too, against all the leading politicians of Bellefonte. Here the success of the Modoc element ends. Not another one of them had a show or got a nomination, and there were one or more Modoc candidates for every office to be filled. David Lohr, the only modoc candidate for Sheriff, withdrew his hopeless candidacy three weeks ago. Christian Derr, was a Modoc and had no more show for Treasurer, than if he'd been still-born. George W. Rembarger, a modoc, gave way to the old-line support which Williams recieved. John Noll, a Horntown modoc, hadn't a corporal's guard of supporters. Nelson Lucas, another Modoc, and candidate for Recorder, was also counted out; so was Jonas Stine, of Patton, for Commissioner.

Now let us glance at the nominees. L. W. Munson, for Sheiff, is straight-out. D. A. Musser, of Millheim, the candidate for Treasurer, never voted anything but the Democratic ticket straight, and has been a bitter opponent of Mr. Meek. Aaron Williams, ditto, though not exactly an opponent in the Musser sense. W. E. Burchfield, for Register, is of the same stripe; so is W. A. Tobias for Recorder, and so are all the balance of the candidates. It will be seen from this showing that the Modocs had no show at all, except in the two instances of Alexander and Meek. Let the reader note another important fact, that there is not a member of the order of Junior Sons of '76 on the ticket. They were entirely discarded. Note another important fact: that not a granger was placed upon the ticket for any office, save one, and that office doesn't pay the cost of the candidate's tickets.

Several other facts are self evident. No county nominations could have been made that would have furthered Mr. Meek's chances more for the district nomination for State Senator. Those who before opposed him, now have their hands tied and are bound to urge his nomination in the district conference. This is true, as shall plainly appear. Munson and his friends must support him, or run the chances of Mr. Meek's defeating him, which he could easily do. D. A. Musser and his friends are in exactly the same predicament. This Mr Meek saw would be the case, and therefore he got Austin Hinton to offer the resolution to the Convention, appointing J. P. Gephart, Esq., T. M. Hall, and Geo. McGaffey his conferrees. The first two of these gentlemen have been among the most substancial of Mr. Meek's opponents in times past. Mr. Gephart deserves the credit of nominating Musser, and must stand by Meek now so that his friend and partner will get into the Treasurer's office. Miller Hall is bound just as closely for a number of similar reasons. So it is in Aaron Williams' case; the Democratic lawyers are pledged to him and must stand by Meek in order that Meek will stand by Williams. Follow the list of candidates on down and similar reasons for standing by the Senatorial candidate present themselves at every step. Sheriff Kline must do so because his relative Newlin Hall, is a candidate for Commissioner. The Shugert influence must go to him, so as to elect Levi Munson, and thereby bar Chester Munson's interference with Col. Shugert's re-nomination to the Legislature. The only man we know of in the party who is left unfettered to fight Mr. Meek to his heart's content, is Mr. Samuel Gilliland, of Harris. With all these reins in his hands, the entire Democratic party of Centre county backing him, it is not improbable that he will carry off the senatorial nomination in the District. His present masterly position has been won at great expense however. The Modocs have been slaughtered; the Junior Sons of '76 have received a slap; the grangers have been pushed to the back ground; and his opponents have been brought cringing to his feet. He deserves, for his most excellent manipulation, the conference nomination.

"And this sad servitude alike denotes
The slave that labors and the slave that votes."

Personals.—Governor Curtin, and Dr. Geo. F. Harris, of this place are at Newport.

—Hon. Wayne McVeigh, and Col. Wm. B. Mann, are expected to speak at the great Republican mass meeting in this place on Wednesday, August 25.

—Gen. James A. Beaver has been absent for a couple of weeks in Virginia.

—Count Von Turkheim proposes to remain in Bellefonte until the expiration of his furlough, a month or more yet.

—Rev. Geo. W. Miller is attending the Cumberland Valley camp-meeting.

—Edward C. Humes, Esq., president of the First National Bank, is now the oldest living native born citizen of Bellefonte; after him comes J. Steele Parsons and Jas. H. Rankin, Esq.

—Hon. Fred Kurtz was in to see us on Monday. He knew that Miles Keplart had left, and wasn't afraid to come to town.

——Only two weeks longer to wait, before the game law expires, and then, ho! for the wooded hills. Game, of every description, is reported to be unusually plenty in all parts of the county, and the gunning season promises to be a lively one. Guns that have been standing idle during the summer months, should be taken down, thoroughly overhauled, and put in good shooting order, and Deschner, the gunsmith, on High street, is just the man to do it. He is prepared to do all kinds of repairing, is a first-class workman, and gives universal satisfaction. He has just received a large and complete stock of ammunation, and also has on hand a large stock of shotguns, rifles, revolvers, etc., and those who contemplate joining in the sport this fall, should go at once and examine his goods.

——Captain Barker, Congressman Mackey, Gen. Merrill, W. A. White, Esq., Mayor Bridgens, Rev. Noblitt, Wm. Parsons, Jr., George F. Ronim, and several other distinguished citizens of Lock Haven, have organized themselves into a base ball club, and played their first game on Saturday last. Nobody is allowed to become a member of the club, unless he is a member of some christian church. Upon being elected a member, and before signing his name to the constitution and by-laws, the candidate must take a pledge forever after to abstain from the use of intoxicating beverages. Any member making use of a profane oath, is fined one dollar and stands suspended until the same be paid over to the treasurer. This fund goes to the benefit of a missionary Sunday school, of which, we believe, Captain Kress is the superintending officer. It is a first-class base ball club, but we suspect that it partakes more of the nature of a Christian association than an acrobatic organization—a sort of Band of Hope as it were.

——John C. Stone, an old saloon keeper in this place, has come to grief. He always was a funny sort of a bad egg, and was continually playing off his fun on somebody. This time he perpetrated a little joke on his wife, who lives with her daugther, a young lady grown, at Lancaster. John travels for Wirtz & Co., liquor merchants, Philadelphia. He spends, probably, one Sunday in a month at home; the rest of his time, he travels, selling spirits and making fun for his customers. On one of his trips to Clinton county, he thought he'd play a joke off on his wife by marrying a certain Maggie J. Hirsch, a rather fine looking woman. Rev. George Warren, of Renova, tied the unlawful knot. After this, Stone glided along pleasantly among his spiritual customers, managing to vibrate between Lancaster and Lock Haven, to divide his attentions between his wives. This state of affairs did not continue long: Stone's happiness was of too sweet a character to last. His Lancaster wife heard of her Lock Haven duplicate, and with a woman's spirit of revenge came to Lock Haven to assert her rights. Accordingly Stone was arraigned before Alderman Batchelor, a man celebrated as much for his virtue as for his learning, and the facts were exposed in the presence of both wives, to a gaping rabble of that virtuous city. The learned Alderman, inquiring if Stone had a deposit of $500.00 to make as a forfeit, if he should not be within the sound of Crier McGhee's voice, when he convened the next session of court, and being answered in the negative, introduced the muchly-married spirits-merchant to Sheriff Fleming, who immediatly furnished him plain food and lodging. The Lancaster wife thought John must be insane. Then the Judge appointed a Committee of Lunacy to set on the bigamist. Lawyers Chatham and Hipple, both ugly enough to scare anybody into insanity, and Dr. J. F. Lorimer with his lance, bore their weight on Stone and found him to be a hard nut, with a mind diseased. He still remains in durance, waiting to see what the court of this district does with a fellow who gets crazy and goes wholesale into the business of matrimony.

Republican Voters, Attention!—You can't vote at the election on Tuesday, November 2nd, if you are not assessed before Wednesday, September 1st.

You can't vote at the next election if you don't get your naturalization papers before Friday, October 1st.

You can't vote at the next election if you do not pay your State and county tax before Friday, October 1st.

——Some fellow who loves to sleep late in the morning tries to excuse himself in this fashion:

"Men used to get up at four o'clock in the morning, but they did not have spring beds and cider down to sleep on. There is a difference between an old-fashioned bed tick with three corn stalks and a bundle of oat strew with blackberry bushes mixed in, and the modern hair mattress."

——What Bellefonte has long needed is a good dressmaker, and now the need is supplied. Mrs. E. A. Seibert and daughter have located in McCafferty's new block, opposite the railroad depot, and are prepared to do all kinds of fashionable dressmaking in a neat and tasty manner, and at the most reasonable rates. The ladies of Bellefonte and vicinity should give them a generous patronage. See advertisement in another column.

——The newspaper is the hand-maid of civilization. No family can maintain its place in society without it. The man reads it for information about the markets and politics; the woman reads it as a diversion from household cares; the young read it both for amusement and information. Thousands of families can take but a single newspaper and that one should be recommended to their consideration which meets their needs, and in Centre county the one best suited to all is the Bellefonte Republican.

——A party of drunken men took possession of that beautiful shady mound in the Park (now used as a cow pasture) on Sunday, and spent the day there in common with several bottles of whiskey. The police were at church and did not hear from it. It would have been the proper thing for the parents of those young ladies they insulted while passing by, to have taken them in charge, and given them a cooling bath in that polluted fountain whose chemical constituents are H2O. This might have brought them to a proper appreciation of their business relations with the public.

——Sweet Potatoes are now just in season. There are many people who are very fond of them, and to such we would say go to Sechler & Co., in the Bush House block, and see the nice lot which they have on hand, and as cheap as can be found anywhere outside of the place where they make them. The Tea's brothers are always on hand with a kind word and pleasant smile for all who come, and would be just as willing to sell a barrel as a peck. We verily believe they would not care a cent if they sold Sechler out clean every day in the week. As it is they keep him busy ordering goods while they sell them and they are as busy as bees at it from morning to night.

Camp Meeting.—The Clintonville Evangelical Camp Meeting association grounds in Porter twp. Clinton Co were crowded last Sunday by a vast concourse of people, mostly me should judge from Centre county. It was estimated by some that there was at least eight thousand persons upon the grounds. Very able speakers were present and large numbers of the people gave earnest attention to the very interesting services although perhaps we might truthfully say that the largest congregation was outside of this saving influence, The grounds of the association are very pleasantly situated, and we were informed by some of the officers that they contemplate some improvements before another year, that will add much to the attractiveness of the place, among which is the building of a Tabernacle and more houses or tents we believe they called them, for the convenience of the worshipers who attend this delightful spot. We were the guest of D. S. Michtlay Esq., who treated us right royally.

——Some no account reptile, whom it would be flattery to call a thief, walked off last Saturday evening with our best hat. It was a new one, and we left it on a table in the hall near the front door while we went into the parlor to have a chat with our cousin. It's hard to lose one's friends; it's hard to see the labor of a year's love turn coldly upon you and go home with another man; it's hard to slip on a lemon peal with a clean pair of linen pantaloons on, and wear a benignant smile all the time, but O, how much harder to lose the only hat you have in the world and go home in the cold moonlight bareheaded when the dog-days are about. We have no remarks to make, no moral to deduce—it was the only hat we had. There is no use weeping over colrapsed lacteal fluid; if the burglar will please call round again when we immediately leave our hat in the hall, we'll not only give him another hat, but will even put a head on him.

——Salt in packages for bathing, etc.

——Our military company meets every evening in the Armory for drill.

Attend to these matters at once. Do it to-day. Don't wait till it is too late.

——The days grow shorter by two minutes every twenty-four hours, just now.

——About one hundred students are in attendance at the Normal School in Milesburg.

——Don't fail to pay your taxes and get yourself registered within the time required by law.

——Remember the grand Republican mass meeting in Bellefonte, on Wednesday evening, August 25.

——It is now unlawful to fish for trout in any of the streams of this county. The time expired on the 15th day of August.

——A sarcastic individual writes asking the repitition of a late joke. W. M. is informed that we seldom repeat and never refund.

——Long-barreled double-jointed California Pea Nuts five cents a glass at Sechler & Co's, in the Bush House block opposite our office.

——A meeting of the Centre County Council P. of H. will be held in the Court House to-morrow (Thursday.) A large attendance is expected.

——The only true philosopher is a boat; we know of several who have kept comfortably drunk for the last month by the generosity of candidates.

——Elsworth, of the Journal, scolds us a little in his last, but he does it in such a mild, Christian spirit, that we are rather glad we give him cause.

——A very affecting paragraph is now going the rounds, detailing the beauty of a sister's love. In our judgment, it depends entirely on whose sister she is.

——The Penn Hall Academy, under Prof. D. M. Wolfe, after being opened for about one month, has fifty students. Good teachers need never be out of employment.

——The Democratic candidates who didn't make it on Tuesday last, have probably failed to notice that we have had rain on every one of the last five Tuesdays.

——A large delegation of the Masonic fraternity of this place will visit Centre Hall tomorrow, to participate in the dedicatory ceremonies of the new lodge to be instituted at that place.

——Mr. J. Speer Thompson, one of the most reliable Republicans in Bald Eagle valley, was in to see us on Friday. We are sorry to say he is an old bachelor, but otherwise you can count on him every time.

——The senatorial conferrees appointed by the Democratic Convention are J. P. Gephart, Esq., G. W. McGaffey, and T. M. Hall, and C. M. Bower, Esq., was elected Chairman of the County Committee.

——The Merchant Tailoring establishment of Mr. Wm. McClellan, No. 4 Brockerhoff Row, has been restocked with an elegant line of fall suitings and a very complete and elegant lot of furnishing goods. Call and see.

——A watch, gold chain, locket and seal ring, in all worth a hundred dollars, were stolen from the vest of James H. Munson, which he left hanging in the feed room of C. Munson & Co's store, during a temporary absence, on Saturday.

——On Tuesday last the County Convention of Democrats adopted the Ohio platform, which favors expansion. We'll bet a new hat that the Democratic State Convention at Erie will adopt a contraction platform, and then where will be the Democracy of Centre County?

——In Mississippi, if a man can get largely and promiscuously into debt, he has a good chance for office. His creditors vote for him in the hope that he will pay up. In this county the Democracy elect the richest men in their party. A poor man has no more chance than an ambitious weather-in a flock of sheep.

——Mrs. Ferguson stepped into Green's drug store, near the depot, the other day, and surveying the hundreds of drawers and bottles filled with drugs and medicines, she exclaimed: "Dear me! how I'd like to be twenty years younger and have about fourteen sick children and have a chance at all these medicines."

——The new insurance firm of Geo. L. Potter & Co., as at present consolidated from several district agencies, is perhaps the best in Central Pennsylvania. The companies represented are among the most reliable in the world, and Mr. Geo. L. Potter, the manager, has no superior as a straightforward, live business man.

——A boy, name unknown, you can call him Smith, masculine gender, was thrown from a butter and egg wagon, on Saturday and sprained his ankle. On the same day a horse attached to a buggy, with a young man attached to both, ran away at the stone school house and threw the youth, name likewise unknown—call him Ferguson, its as wild and melodious—out and disarranged his business transactions for a day or two.
